Gen. Pershing Sinking Fast; Is Placed in Oxygen Tent

Lapses Into Deep Coma; Doctors Unable to Arouse Him.

Rallied Briefly After First Sleep

Blood Pressure Declines and Temperature Rises Two Degrees.

By the Associated Press.

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 25.—Reports from the hospital where Gen. John J. Pershing lay gravely ill tonight said the World War commander had been placed in an oxygen tent and was sinking rapidly.

Dr. Roland Davison announced at 9:30 p. m. (11:30 p. m. Eastern standard time) that his patient was going rapidly. He said there seemed to be little the physicians could do to check the relapse. He called a local laboratory for equipment to take a chemical test of the general's blood.

Reports said the general "looks very much worse." He sank into a coma last night from which he did not revive until heart stimulants had been administered.

Physicians said another such relapse would be serious if not fatal.

Attendants said the general had lapsed into a deep coma from which he could not be aroused.

As a second oxygen tent was rushed to the sick room at 8:15 p. m. (10:15 p. m. E.S.T.) relatives took up their anxious vigil as of last night.

The general's son, Warren, and a nephew, Frank, were at the bedside. Miss May Pershing, an only sister, paced the corridor nervously.

A sick room bulletin issued by Dr. Davison and Lieut. Col. S. U. Marietta at 5 p. m. (7 p. m. E. S. T.) disclosed the general was on the downward grade again.

It reported an increase of two degrees of temperature and a decrease in blood pressure.

Hoffman Condemns Roosevelt for Sale Of His Interviews

By the Associated Press.

Representative Hoffman (Republican), Michigan, criticized President Roosevelt in the House yesterday for selling some of the transcripts of his semi-weekly press conferences.

"Using his Presidential office as his advertising agency—and this without cost to him personally," Hoffman said, "The President retains a monopoly, prevents those who are engaged in the business of reporting and writing from using their information and sell his manuscript to a syndicate, for it is said, something like $100,000.

"He uses the presence of the reporters to window-dress his remarks; then closes their mouths, stills their pens and he writes and sells his observations.

"Are we shortly to be advised through full-page advertisements of the brand of cigarettes the President smokes?"

Rep. Maverick Suggests 'Americas' Constitution

New York, Feb. 25 (AP).—Representative Maverick (Democrat), of Texas, suggested tonight the establishment of an unwritten "Constitution of the Americas" upon the basis of one for all and all for one.

In a speech prepared for the national conference of the Progressive Education Association, the Texan said the best contribution to peace this country could make was to set an example of amity and economic justice in the Western hemisphere.

Poetic Mocking Bird Back at Md. U. Class

The University of Maryland's poetry-loving mocking bird returned to class yesterday after playing "hooky" for the past several months.

The bird became a favorite with students of Prof. George Sixby's class in romantic poetry last fall, when it never failed to perch on a windowsill outside a classroom window each day. Members of the class avowed that the bird learned to chirp out metres.

With winter's approach, the bird apparently left for warmer climes, but yesterday he returned to his favorite windowsill outside the classroom.

Boy Who Fled From Mother Four Times Is Given to Father

Divorced Frankels Reach New Agreement on Custody of Son.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Feb. 25.—Twelve-year-old Howard Frankel, who ran away from his mother four times in defiance of a New Jersey Court custody order, was returned to his father tonight.

After the boy's divorced parents confered for three hours in Brooklyn Children's Court, Judge Herbert O'Brien approved an agreement under which Howard will live with his father, Julius Frankel, Linden (N. J.) merchant, and visit his mother at stated intervals.

The decision resulted from an action by the boy's paternal grandmother to have him declared a neglected child. He was declared a court ward and placed under the custody agreement, subject technically to the supervision of a probation officer.

The boy will visit his mother, Mrs. Rose Frankel, in Brooklyn every Sunday, one week-end a month, and every second New York legal holiday.

He was awarded to his mother December 30 by New Jersey Chancery Court Advisory Master Dougall Herr. Brought to New York and placed in school, he repeatedly ran away, being found usually by police on subway and elevated trains on his way back to his father.

He once threatened to kill himself if he were forced to live with his mother.

Thomas Is Sure Oklahoma Will Lose U.S. Help

Says State Must Amend Its Setup if Payments Are to Continue.

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, said yesterday that evidence submitted at a Social Security Board hearing this week "clearly indicates that Federal co-operation will be withdrawn from Oklahoma" in caring for needy aged in the State.

"If Oklahoma," he said in a statement, "is to continue to receive Federal assistance, a new and amended setup must be presented to the Federal board for approval."

Meanwhile, officials of the State Welfare Commission here yesterday adopted a resolution promising a thorough cleanup of the situation under which old-age checks were admitted to have been given dead men and $685,000 had been paid out irregularly.

"The evidence submitted," Thomas said, "shows that Oklahoma's trouble is due largely to political interference with the work of the commission and its employes.

"The evidence as interpreted by Chairman Altmeyer clearly indicates that Federal co-operation will be withdrawn from Oklahoma. This makes mandatory the following:

Nazi Lawyer Tried For 'Embezzling' Nobel Peace Prize

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Feb. 25.—Kurt Wannow, a Berlin lawyer, was arraigned today on a charge of embezzling the greater part of the 1935 Nobel Peace prize awarded to Carl von Ossietzky, German pacifist.

Von Ossietzky gave Wannow power of attorney in January, 1937, to collect the prize of 100,000 marks ($40,000) at Oslo, Norway. It was alleged that the attorney charged 20,000 marks ($8,000) commission for his services and spent much of the remainder for various purposes, leaving only 16,500 marks ($6,000).

(Von Ossietzky, a pacifist editor, was confined to concentration camp as soon as Adolf Hitler attained power in 1933. He was released in 1936 when it became known he was to receive the Nobel prize.)

Pine Approval By Committee Expected Soon

Nomination for District Attorney in Hands of Austin, Neely, King.

The President's nomination of David Andrew Pine as United States Attorney for the District of Columbia was referred yesterday to a subcommittee of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

A report, it was predicted last night, will be submitted to the full committee in the next few days and Pine's name will be sent to the Senate for confirmation. The subcommittee includes Senators King (Democrat), of Utah; Neely (Republican), of West Virginia and Austin (Republican), Vermont.

Senator King, chairman of the sub-committee, said he was "very much pleased with Pine's nomination," and unless there was an objection, he would urge immediate action. The Utah Senator, it was recalled, indorsed Pine for the job several years ago.

Pine has been acting United States Attorney since December 31, when the office was vacated by Leslie C. Garnett. The President's nomination was made upon the recommendation of Attorney General Homer Cummings.

Pine has been a member of the Wife-Beater Gets Score of Lashes, Six Months in Jail

Baltimore, Feb. 25 (AP).—For beating his wife, Clyde Miller, a printer was sentenced today to 20 lashes at the whipping post, unused for five years in Baltimore, and six months in the House of Correction.

Mrs. Elizabeth Miller, the wife, testified with difficulty since her eyes were closed and her face puffed by the blows.

Miller said he beat his wife after he found her "pretty well drunked up" sitting with three men in a saloon. One of the men, he testified, "picked a fight" with him and beat him up before he induced his wife to leave.

Admitting he served a previous jail term for wife beating, Miller said he took her home, tried to put her to bed, but finally "lost my head."

Embezzler Pardoned To Support His Family

Des Moines, Ia., Feb. 25 (AP).—William J. Johns, former Marion County deputy treasurer imprisoned four months ago for embezzlement, was free tonight to go to work to support his wife and 7-year-old daughter, Marlyn.

Gov. Nelson G. Kraschel today pardoned Johns, who was released from prison last week to be with his sick daughter.

Senate Votes Itself a Voice In Patronage

Amends Offices Bill to Take Hand in Allotting All $5,000 Jobs.

Glass Scores 'Insolence' of Government 'Bureaucrats.'

The Senate yesterday passed the $1,412,454,465 independent offices bill, but first voted to extend its patronage influence over all additional lawyers and experts employed in these Federal agencies at a salary of more than $5,000.

An amendment by Senator Kenneth McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, requiring Presidential appointment and Senate confirmation of all such officials was adopted by a voice vote. Only the Tennessee Valley Authority was exempted from the rule, on motion of Senator George W. Norris, Nebraska Independent and TVA "father."

Charges by Senators that politics and patronage are more rife in the Federal executive departments than in the Senate preceded approval of the amendment.

TVA Dam Is Voted.

Before final passage of the bill, the Senate voted $2,763,000 to start TVA work on the $112,000,000 Gilbertsville (Kentucky) dam, 20 miles from the mouth of the Tennessee River. Norris also led the fight for this fund, approved over sharp bipartisan opposition.

A third victory for the white-haired Nebraskan was registered when the Senate accepted his amendment increasing appropriations for the Rural Electrification Administration from $1,587,000 to $1,650,000.

The independent offices bill, as sent back to the House, restored a $385,000 cut ordered by the Senate Appropriations Committee in funds for the National Labor Relations Board. But a House provision giving the President power to reduce or eliminate by Executive order individual items in appropriation bills was eliminated. The President, in his budget message, asked this authority, but the Senate committee struck it from the House bill. The Senate upheld the committee.

"Pie Counter" Charged.

McKellar's amendment giving the Senate power of confirmation over additional experts and attorneys in independent establishments paid more than $5,000, precipitated a field day discussion of patronage.

Norris charged, it would create a "political pie counter." This drew a fiery rebuttal from Senator Carter Glass (Democrat), of Virginia.

Nazis Seize Cities, Fight Free Austria

Support of Duce Seen Behind Schuschnigg's Bold Independence.

The European Situation.

Austrian Nazis announced they would fight Chancellor Schuschnigg and his determined stand for an independent Austria. Nazis were reported in control of cities along the Italian and Yugoslav frontiers of Austria.

Schuschnigg's speech defying German penetration aims led to reports he had received guarantees of support from Italian Premier Mussolini, possibly at the insistence of Great Britain.

In England, Anthony Eden forecast failure for the policy of dealing with dictators that forced him out of the British cabinet, but declined to lead the fight against present British leaders. Page 2.

Nazis Defiant.

By the Associated Press.

Vienna, Feb. 25.—Austrian Nazis, seething with dissatisfaction, declared tonight they planned a fight to the finish against Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg and his determined stand for a free and independent Austria.

[Nazis were reported to be in virtual control of several cities in Styria and Carinthia Provinces along the Southern frontiers, according to the United Press. Reports from Graz said the Nazi demonstrations were becoming a "landslide" along Italian and Yugoslav borders and that houses were blanketed by German Nazi swastikas.—Editor's note.]

Fatherland front members of Austria's only legal party, pleased as they were by the chancellor's defiance of Nazi hopes to unite Germany and Austria, admitted the situation was "critical."

The forthright speech of Schuschnigg to Parliament last night led to wide conjecture that somebody or something had given him the assurance to speak so bodly of independence and freedom in the face of German support of Austria's Nazis.

Duce's Aid Reported.

One widely believed report said Schuschnigg had talked to Italian Premier Mussolini by telephone before the speech and was told to speak out.

It was also said that Britain had hinted to Mussolini that the Anglo-Italian friendship negotiations might proceed more smoothly if Mussolini kept a friendly eye on Austria's independence.

Austria's Nazis considered conditions were returning to the status of a month ago—before Schuschnigg and Hitler met at Berchtesgaden and Nazis were admitted into the Austrian cabinet.

Then the Nazi weapon was terror—a terror that was rigidly suppressed by Schuschnigg.

In any case radical Nazis are known to want to stage demonstrations over this week-end—a threat which may itself be a test of strength of their leadership and discipline within the Nazi ranks.

At Graz, a Nazi center, the University Technical College was closed by the education ministry because the students demanded representation on the student council and replacement of university police by Nazi orderlies.

Handbills distributed by Nazis at Graz avowed "the fight will go on." Graz communists openly expressed the opinion "open battles" would come between Nazis and anti-Nazis.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull yesterday revealed that the United States Government in a formal note to Japan has again asserted American rights in China through a warning that the Tokyo government will be held responsible for damages to Americans and their property resulting from the operation of the Nipponese armed forces.

The warning, a reiteration of a declaration made several times during the present Sino-Japanese conflict, was contained in a note delivered to the Japanese foreign office last Saturday by American Ambassador Joseph C. Grew. So far no reply has been received here from the Japanese.

The occasion for the note was a formal notice circulated by the Japanese on February 3, calling on all Americans and other foreigners to evacuate the war zone of central China. The notice also required that the Japanese military forces be supplied with maps indicating the location of foreign property and a description of the protective marking of such property. A number of American religious and philanthropic missions are said to be located within the area covered by the Japanese notice.

Although the American note was sent last Saturday, the contentions it enunciated were sufficiently broad to apply with equal force to the notice the Japanese army was said in cables to have served yesterday on Americans and other foreigners that if they remain in Hankow it will be at their own peril. This Government's viewpoint is that the Japanese have no right either to order or suggest an evacuation of Americans from points in China.

The text of the American note was not available here, but it was explained at the State Department the communication primarily was a re-

Senate Inquiry Into Maritime Labor Is Voted

Action Follows Testimony Communists Hold Union Offices.

By Edward T. Folliard

The Senate yesterday adopted the Copeland resolution authorizing $25,000 for a "full and complete investigation" of the labor situation in the American merchant marine.

Chairman Copeland, of the Senate Commerce Committee, drafted the resolution after several witnesses, including a New York policeman and a seaman, whose names have never been revealed, testified that Communists hold key positions in at least one of the big maritime unions.

Vice President Garner, it was reported, has taken a deep interest in the proposed investigation.

The Copeland resolution, which originally called for an appropriation of $50,000, provides that the investigation be conducted by a special committee of five Senators. This committee is empowered to hold hearings whenever and wherever it chooses, to employ experts, and to issue subpenas for witnesses or documents.

Earlier yesterday, the Committee for Industrial Organization asked the Senate Commerce and Labor Committees to give Harry Bridges, West Coast longshoremens' leader and a C. I. O. officer, an opportunity to answer the "wild and loose-lipped accusations" made against him by his A. F. of L. rival on the East Coast, Joseph P. Ryan.

Ryan, among others, charged that Bridges was a Communist.

$10,000 Salaries Cut 10 Per Cent By General Motors

New York, Feb. 25 (AP).—General Motors Corporation today announced pay cuts of 10 per cent for salaried workers receiving up to $10,000 annually and deeper slashes for executives in the big pay brackets, effective March 1.

Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of the corporation, said the action was taken because of the "drastic reduction" in General Motors business. The cut, he added, was an adjustment of compensation of the salaried employe. He said the corporation's "wage earners are receiving substantially less than formerly as a result of the decrease in the number of working hours."

Informed circles estimated the cut would affect about 40,000 workers.

It was the first pay slash announced by an important company in the automotive field, affecting white collar workers, but it was in line with action taken recently by United States Steel Corporation and Bethlehem Steel.

Raiders Seize 125 Vagrants In Crime Drive

First 10 Arrested Found to Have Criminal Records.

One of 125 colored men snared in a series of poolroom raids yesterday was identified last night at a police lineup by two women as a purse snatcher. Approximately 50 victims of petty theft were on hand at the lineup.

Police said all the men captured were fingerprinted and their prints sent to the Federal Bureau of Investigation. Those who have criminal records will be held for a second lineup Monday.

The man identified was Douglas Stewart, 24, of the 100 block of V street northwest. He was identified by Miss Doris Tynes, of 1715 Oregon street northwest, who lost a pocketbook containing $25 to a purse snatcher at Seventeenth and T street northwest, and Miss Margaret Hirst, of 1915 Sixteenth street northwest, who was robbed of her pocketbook containing $1 near her home.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said the 125 colored men snared in the raids were all without employment.

While the lineup was in progress a lone white man with a pistol concealed in a folded newspaper held up the United Liquor Store, 307 Eleventh street northwest, and escaped with $150 and a pint of whisky. Lewis Wieger, of 4521 Fifteenth street northwest, clerk in the store, said the bandit demanded the "best brand" of whisky in stock.

Five of the men picked up in a raid at Fourteenth and T streets northwest were juveniles, two of whom were on probation from the Juvenile Court.

Police said that Johnson McCoy, 18, of Florida, admitted five recent holdups and pocketbook snatchings.

A man giving his name as Henry Hopkins Williams, of the 900 block of T street northwest, surrendered a black jack made of stones sewed

Navy Air Chief Holds 15 Battleships Equal 6,750 Bombers.

By Sidney Olson.

The House Naval Affairs Committee, sitting in special night session, continued to add millions of dollars to the ballooning naval expansion bill last night, soon after 12 Senators had jointly proposed a constitutional amendment requiring a national war referendum.

The twelve Senators—six Democrats, three Republicans, two Farmer-Laborites and one Progressive—in a joint statement expressed their fears of the "unrestricted power of one individual to commit the nation to war," and insisted their proposal would "place a democratic check on a completely unlimited executive power."

President Roosevelt, asked about the relative wartime effectiveness of aircraft and battleships, said his message asking a 20 per cent fleet increase, was the best answer.

War Profits Bill Reported.

Rear Admiral Arthur B. Cook, chief, Naval Bureau of Aeronautics, told the House Naval Affairs Committee 6,750 bombers would be required to deliver firepower equal to that of the Navy's present 15 battleships.

The House Military Affairs Committee, ending a month-long internal squabble, favorably reported a drastic bill to cut down wartime profits, authorize drafts of manpower and grant the President widespread emergency powers over the national industrial life.

The Naval Affairs Committee learned that the additional 950 new Navy planes would add $106,000,000 to the $1,050,000,000 now estimated as the cost of the 20 per cent increase, and at the night session, asked Admiral Cook to seek an additional $10,000,000 for aircraft experimentation.

"Scare" Is Assailed.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Charles Edison presented to President Roosevelt a secret report embodying recommendations of a special civilian advisory board on battleship building — suggestions likely to be incorporated in future construction.

Senate Delays Reorganization For Time Being

Other Appropriation Bill May Take Precedence After Week-End.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration's Government reorganization bill, center of a coalition fight on power for the President to revamp the Civil Service and reduce, co-ordinate and merge Federal agencies, yesterday was made the unfinished business of the Senate.

The Senate called up the controversial bill on motion of Senator James F. Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, chairman of the Senate Government Reorganization Committee. Temporarily the measure may be laid aside Monday for another appropriation bill, before a leadership effort is made to drive it to passage.

Seven Democratic Senators, each prominently identified with the successful fight on the President's court bill, were ready with ten modifying amendments tightening reins on the President's reorganization powers, retaining the present Civil Service Commission, and blocking abolition of the Comptroller General's office.

Byrd Backs Fight.

"If these amendments are adopted, I will vote for the bill," said Senator Harry Flood Byrd (Democrat), Virginia, leading opponent of the proposed concentration of administrative authority under the President.

The Virginian will argue that the same issues which brought overthrow of the court plan are involved in the Byrnes bill, and the opposition fight will follow similar lines. Democratic opponents will have solid Republican support, and debate may range over two or three weeks.

Besides Byrd, Democratic Senators seeking sharp changes in the measure include Wheeler, of Montana; Clark, of Missouri; Bulow, of South Dakota; Burke, of Nebraska; Walsh, of Massachusetts, and Bailey, of North Carolina.

House Has Passed Bills.

Two bills, authorizing the President to reorganize 135 separate agencies, many performing similar functions, and providing for six administrative assistants to the President, already have passed the House. Abolition of the General Accounting Office and Civil Service reforms were not pushed through the House. But these are included in the Senate bill, and would be ironed out in conference with the House.

The omnibus bill called up by Byrnes yesterday carried modifications in the President's original reorganization recommendations as concessions to the opposition. Fifteen agencies were exempted, including the Federal Reserve System, and such independent establishments as the Federal Power Commission, the Federal Trade Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Executive Orders Planned.

The President would reorganize by means of executive orders. These must lie before Congress for 60 calendar days before becoming effective. Senator Wheeler will lead the fight to require Congressional approval by joint resolution of every order, and Byrd will ask that orders be directed toward an ultimate 10 per cent saving in expenditures.

The Byrnes bill abolishes the present Civil Service Commission and creates a single civil service administrator, with an advisory board of seven. Walsh, Clark and Burke have amendments to continue the present Civil Service Commission.

The American Federation of Labor also is bitterly fighting proposed one-man control of civil service, under the President.

Unopposed at present are provisions giving the President authority to extend the classified civil service, affecting 200,000 Government employes not now under classified service.

Bitterest target of the opposition fight is "Title III" of the bill, abolishing the General Accounting Office, and the office of Comptroller General.

Under the Byrnes bill, so-called executive duties and day-by-day administrative accounting control would be transferred from the Comptroller to the Budget Director, as agent for the President.

Audit Power Retained.

Only the Comptroller's power of audit would be retained, and vested in an auditor general. This official would have only authority of post audit. He would investigate expenditures, receipts and funds of the Government, and report to a new Joint Congressional Committee on Public Accounts, to which he would be solely responsible.

Opposition Senators will attempt to maintain the comptroller's general office intact as a Treasury watchdog. Senators Walsh, Clark and Burke have an amendment to continue the General Accounting Office as it now is, but providing for appeal from the comptroller general's rulings to the Court of Claims.

Other provisions of the revised Byrnes bill would create one new Government department—a Department of Public Welfare—into which it is planned that 20 Federal welfare agencies will be placed. The Secretary of Welfare would be a member of the Cabinet. The bill also creates a national resources planning board of five members, to integrate and study planning policies and the development of national resources.

2 Spanish Youths Ask Haven in U.S. From 'the Bombs'

Baltimore, Feb. 25 (AP).—Two bewildered 16-year-old Spanish youths, who stowed away on an American blockade runner, clutched tiny gold crosses in their hands at the city jail today and cried: "Don't send us back. We'll be put in prison or shot."

The two, Joachim Laball Pitark, a Barcelona tailor's son, and Raimundo Belijera, son of a Valencia carpenter, arrived here aboard the Wisconsin and immdeiately were jailed by immigration authorities.

Eyes wide with terror, they pleaded through an interpreter:

"Don't send us back to Spain. There is no work, no money any more in Spain. Children run about the streets, waiting for the bombs to get them."

By Franklyn Waltman

From the manner in which American officials received the Hungarian war debt proposal one would think that Minister John Pelenyi was trying to touch Uncle Sam for another loan instead of offering to pay us some money.

WALTMAN.

Shush! Shush! That has been the official response since the Hungarian proposal was made. The President, when asked about it, gets off the subject with the speed he would use in dropping a hot potato. Congressional leaders assert it would make Congress very angry if the matter were called to its attention. State Department attaches assert they can say nothing—it is a matter for the Treasury. Treasury spokesmen assert they can say nothing—the matter is being studied. One gets the impression that it was a terrible thing for the Hungarians to propose a plan for payment of their debt to this Government.

Actually there should be loud cheers over the Hungarian offer. Of course, it consists of a scaling down of the amount due us under the existing debt agreement. But does anyone in his right mind really believe any of the war debt agreements will be—indeed, could be—fulfilled? So as hard-headed Yankees (frequently a fanciful description), why should we not undertake to make the best terms possible and clear away this economic debris of the post-war period?

Briefly, the Hungarians offer to pay us, in 30 annual installments, the entire sum of money which this Government advanced to them in the form of flour after the war. In essence the heart of the proposal is that we sacrifice our claim for interest on the indebtedness from the beginning.

The details of Hungary's debt are these: Hungary after the war purchased from the United States Grain Corporation, on credit, 13,890 tons of flour to feed its starving people at a price of $121.37 per ton, or a total of $1,685,835. This sum was the original Hungarian indebtedness.

In 1924 Hungary and the United States entered into a debt funding agreement regarding this indebtedness. To the original sum $253,917 was added as accrued interest at 4¼ per cent from May 29, 1920, to December 15, 1923, making the total of the funded debt $1,939,000. Hungary paid $753 in cash at the time in order to get the rounded figure.

The agreement provided that Hungary would pay the funded indebtedness in a series of graduated annual payments over 62 years. The unpaid portion of the indebtedness carried an interest rate of 3 per cent until 1933 and thereafter of 3 1-3 per cent. The total sum, on account of principal and interest, which Hungary was required to pay under this agreement was $4,754,431.

Between 1924 and 1931, when Hungary suspended the transfer of payments on this debt, that government had paid to the United States $468,466, but of that sum only $73,995 was on account of principal, the remaining $393,717 being interest payments. Thus, after paying the United States almost one-half million dollars, the Hungarians found they still owed this country on account of principal $1,908,560, or some $222,000 more than the original debt.

The Hungarians now propose that we go back to the original indebtedness as the basic figure and that we credit against that figure, as payments on principal, all that the Budapest government has paid the Treasury. Thus, from the original debt of $1,685,835 we would deduct payments of $478,294 (including a $9,828 payment last December), leaving the sum due at $1,207,541. The Hungarians offer to pay us this sum, without interest, in 30 annual installments.

If such an offer were accepted and fulfilled, this Government would get back in full the credit originally advanced, even though it lost approximately $3,000,000 in estimated interest payments. If the offer, or one like it, is not accepted, the probability is that we shall receive nothing further on account from Hungary. Thus the question is not one of a choice between a total payment of $4,754,431 or $1,685,835 by Hungary, but actually it is whether this country is willing to take $1,685,835 or be content with the $478,294 already paid by Hungary with little prospect of anything more.

One reason for the cautious attitude toward the Hungarian offer is the suspicion that it has an ulterior purpose—that the Hungarians wish to absolve themselves from the restrictions of the Johnson act and float a loan in this country. The Hungarian spokesman here disavows such a purpose on Hungary's part. But even if Hungary did wish to become eligible to borrow money here, that certainly is not a valid reason for snubbing the offer to pay a readjusted debt.

In some quarters it also is suspected that Hungary is acting as a bell-wether for more important debtors of this Government, and it is asserted that if the Hungarian proposal is accepted it would establish a precedent which would have to be granted to all. The Hungarian spokesman here insists that his government is acting independently, inspired only by her particular circumstances, and that the Hungarian debt was a relief debt, not a war debt, and thus is not on a par with the indebtedness of this country's allies in the World War.

But, in the name of all good sense and reason, why should we not establish the proposed Hungarian settlement as a precedent and encourage all our war debtors to seek such a settlement? The total sums which we advanced during and after the World War to various foreign governments amounted to $10,350,479,074. They have paid us a total of $2,747,271,136, of which almost $2,000,000,000 was on account of interest.

Under the Hungarian formula we would deduct from the original indebtedness the entire sum of payments made. On that basis there would be due this government approximately $7,600,000,000. Payment of this sum in 30 equal annual installments would mean a Treasury receipt of slightly more than $250,000,000 a year. In these days of governmental financial stringency who has the hardihood to sneer at $250,000,000 in annual income for the Treasury?

And, if you will excuse the pun, hasn't Congress always insisted that it was interested only in the principle of the war debt problem?

House Finishes Hearing on Bill to Give U. S. Title to Coastal Oil Lands.

By the Associated Press.

The House Judiciary Committee finished hearings yesterday on a bill to vest title of submerged coastal oil lands in the Government. William McCraw, Texas Attorney General, an opponent, and Commander Howard Biesmeier, of the Navy Department, a proponent, were closing witnesses.

McCraw reiterated contentions coast States had sovereign rights off their shorelines, and asserted Texas and the 13 original States would be exempt from the proposed measure because they were original owners of their soil and never relinquished titles to the United States.

Biesemeier said the bill would not create title, but would direct the Justice Department to institute litigation to determine the true owners of disputed lands.

Eden Predicts Chamberlain's Plan Will Fail

By the Associated Press.

London, Feb. 25.—Anthony Eden shouted a prophecy of failure tonight for the policy of dealing with dictators that forced him out of the British Cabinet. He then washed his hands of the battle being waged for his foreign policy by government opponents.

The resigned foreign secretary defended his break with Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain at a mass meeting of his midlands constituents at Leamington, but made clear that the liberal and labor parties would get no help from him to overthrow the national cabinet.

Eden's opponent in one of Britain's most dramatic political duels of modern times—the tall, austere Chamberlain—pressed on, meanwhile, in his determined effort to reach an understanding with Fascist Italy as the first step toward a general European settlement.

Wishes Rival Success.

And Eden, although doubting his wisdom, wished Chamberlain success in his "realistic" search for lasting peace and appealed for the nation to stand united.

Eden said:

"The decision is made. Parliament has indorsed it. Very well.

"The government must then go ahead on the course which they have chosen and, neither by word nor deed, do I desire now to say anything to make their task more difficult."

The possibility that the prime minister, in carrying out his new foreign policy, might cause an upheaval in the ranks of the dominant Conservative Party thus was diminished by Eden's retirement from the scene.

Halifax Choice Assailed.

But Chamberlain's selection of a new foreign secretary from the House of Lords—Viscount Halifax, whom he sent to Berlin last November to start talks with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler—brought a new storm of opposition in the House of Commons.

Labor leaders charged Chamberlain was defying Britain's unwritten constitution by naming a peer to the foreign office, and served notice they would wage a determined fight against having a foreign secretary who could not be questioned in the House of Commons.

But Chamberlain, unmoved, went forward with the groundwork for the "peace" conversations that are to start in Rome immediately.

After the outburst in Commons today, he waited until Parliament recessed for the week-end and then announced the Halifax appointment.

Aid for Austria Seen.

Halifax conferred at length with the Earl of Perth, Ambassador to Rome, who rushed home for instructions for the talks next week, in which Chamberlain hopes to wipe out the long standing Anglo-Italian difficulties.

Diplomatic sources saw a new turn in European affairs from Chamberlain's policy that might block further German dominance of central Europe—Italian support of Austrian independence.

They pointed to the warm praise paid Italian Premier Mussolini by Austria's Chancellor Schuschnigg in his speech to his Parliament last night as one who understood Austria.

A report circulated widely in Vienna today that Schuschnigg had talked by telephone with Il Duce before his open defiance of Nazi efforts to unite Germany and Austria. Vienna also reported Britain had told Italy the path to friendship might be smoothed by Italian support of Austrian independence.

Germany May Join.

Diplomatic quarters in London speculated on Germany's joining the Rome meeting and with France enlarging it into a four-sided parley, covering the whole range of European problems.

Reports that Joachim von Ribbentrop, new German foreign minister, was expected soon in London to say good-by to the diplomatic corps, in which he had served as German ambassador, gave rise to the belief Germany would join the negotiations.

Now that Schuschnigg has reminded Mussolini what good friends they always have been, it was felt Germany was anxious that no Anglo-Italian talks take place without a German present to safeguard Nazi interests in central Europe.

Il Duce's Concessions.

The controlled Italian radio and press has reflected Il Duce's first "concessions" to create a friendly atmosphere:

1. The Bari radio station's broadcasts to the Near East about Britain "murdering Arabs" and other diatribes have been dropped.

2. Anti-British editorials have vanished from Italian papers and have been replaced by headlines praising Chamberlain.

Eden voiced the belief that his policy of standing firm against dictators would obtain the same results "if they are there to be obtained, without the risks attendant on the present course."

He vigorously asserted his belief that "it is with great democracies of Europe and America that our natural affinities lie."

He gave this as the crux of his conflict with the prime minister on seeking Anglo-Italian friendship:

"Is it to be an agreement, when you can get it, negotiated on a solid basis—or is it to be an agreement, if you can get it, regardless of the basis?"

Declaring that he was willing to accept the verdict of history on whether he or Chamberlain was right, Eden said that it was "the nation which matters."

Lord Halifax Becomes Britain's Foreign Secretary

Associated Press Photos.

Japan Refuses Responsibility For U. S. Lives

Bold Notice of Hankow Drive Held Result of British About-Face.

By the United Press.

Shanghai (Saturday), Feb. 26.—The Japanese army today served notice to the United States and the world that it intends to occupy the provisional capital of Nationalist China in Hankow and the Americans and other foreigners who remain there do so at their peril.

The decision was believed to be a direct result of the British cabinet crisis which resulted in the resignation of Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden and London's abandonment of his efforts to effect a united front with the United States in the Far East.

Chinese believed it left Washington virtually alone in the fight to preserve the rights of Americans in this country, for, they asserted, the new foreign policy of the British government will be to placate Japan and ignore her aggressions in China as Britain did during the Japanese occupation of Manchuria and parts of north China in 1931-33.

Anglo-Japanese Pact?

Many Chinese believed that a renewal of the old Anglo-Japanese alliance, scrapped at the insistence of the United States, is a possibility.

They believed a deal now is in the making under which Japan would agree to respect British interests in South China and the Yangtze Valley and that Britain would agree to recognize Japan's conquest of Manchuria and the independence of the pro-Japanese state of Manchukuo plus the independence of the de facto government which Japan has created in Peiping to administer those areas of China which she has occupied during the present undeclared war.

The Japanese were reported to be massing 300,000 men for the Hankow drive and to expect to occupy the capital within a month.

They pointed out that Americans and other foreigners in the Hankow area were certain to be endangered, along with their property, in the vast fighting which is certain to take place before they can capture the strategic "Wu-Han" area.

Tokyo Claims Air Victory.

Shanghai (Saturday), Feb. 26 (AP).—Japan claimed today to have struck China's air force a paralyzing blow in a great air battle over the Nanchang Airdrome, "nerve center" of China's aviation, in Kiangsi Province.

Chinese, however, disputed the Japanese version of the battle in which about 100 planes were said to have been engaged.

Japanese said 50 of their own naval planes overwhelmed a fleet of 40 "Russian and American" manufactured Chinese combat planes that rose to battle them. Chinese said they counted 39 Japanese raiders.

"More than 30" Chinese fighting planes were shot down and extensive damage inflicted on the air base by the bombers, the Japanese naval command declared.

Chinese asserted they destroyed eight of the Japanese planes and mentioned neither losses to their own fleet nor damage to the airdrome.

At the same time Japanese denied Chinese reports their troops had suffered heavily in central China, where the Chinese said their forces had counter-attacked in southern Shantung Province and along the Tientsin-Pukow Railroad, in the eastern sector of the Lunghai front.

Britain Assures France Against Secret Bargains

By the United Press.

Paris, Feb. 25.—Great Britain stepped in dramatically tonight to bolster Premier Chautemps as his Popular Front government fought for its life in the Chamber of Deputies on a compromise policy to follow Britain in listening to what Europe's dictators have to offer.

The Popular Front was badly split and Chautemps was under fiery attacks from both the right and the left when, during a dinner-hour recess in a day-long debate, the premier and Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos hurried into conference with British Ambassador Sir Eric Phipps. The ambassador, explaining that he wanted to enable Chautemps to speak with "added authority" on British relations with Italy and Germany and the solidarity of the Anglo-French entente, assured the French leaders London had no intention of striking any bargain, "behind the back" of France.

Phipps was understood to have asked Chautemps and Delbos if they agreed "in principle" to British negotiations with Italy on the basis of:

Recognition of Italy's Ethiopian conquest.

Mediterranean balance, each power retaining existing naval and air bases.

Recognition of belligerency rights in Spain.

The British ambassador stressed that France was not being asked to agree to these points, but merely approve them as the basis for Britain's dealings with Premier Mussolini and thereby confirm that Britain was undertaking nothing without knowledge of France.

Japanese Diet Fights Cabinet's 'Nazi' Measure

House in Uproar; Similar Issue Toppled Government Last Year.

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Feb. 25.—A bitter controversy on lines of democracy against dictatorship pitted Japan's House of Representatives against the cabinet today in a critical struggle.

The issue was over the drastic war control bill which the cabinet was determined to make law and which members of Parliament resisted as an innovation of fascism.

The house, which was recessed yesterday when hoots and howls interrupted debate on the measure, again assailed it in a tumultuous session and sent it back to a 45-member committee for revision.

Leaders of the opposition were cheered wildly when they stormed against the legislation "Nazi style," charging it would emasculate the constitution and rob the Japanese people of their basic rights.

"The situation is very grave," said Gen. Sugiyama, the war minister, urging passage of the bill. "The fate of the nation hangs on this occasion."

In a similar issue last year, obdurate political leaders brought about the downfall of Premier General Senjuro Hayashi after he had threatened to govern without Parliament. The political parties accused his semi-military government of fascist leaning.

That, however, was before the outbreak of the war with China which has cost the government hundreds of millions of dollars, admittedly has failed to keep the schedule set for it and has brought an enemy air raid to Japanese soil with fears of more to come.

Admiral Nobumasa Suyetsugu, minister of home affairs, summoned high war officers to his official residence and is reported to have told them:

"If the two parties (Minseito and Seiukai, major political parties) fail to understand the seriousness of this bill, the government must be prepared to face them with extreme determination in order to obtain its passage."

Franco Planes Attack British Ship, Wound 1

Cruisers Shell Loyalist Port; Garrison Revolt Reported in Barcelona.

By the United Press.

Hendaye, France (on the Spanish frontier), Feb. 25.—Generalissimo Franco's insurgent warplanes, raiding loyalist seaports along the Mediterranean, were reported tonight to have bombed a British ship and wounded the wireless operator.

Barcelona reported that the rebel planes bombed the unidentified British ship at Sagunto, 15 miles north of Valencia, and dropped more than 40 bombs on the port.

The insurgent cruisers Canarias and Baleares shelled Palamos, north of Barcelona, causing an unknown number of casualties.

Meanwhile unconfirmed reports were received at Perpignan, France, just over the northeastern Spanish frontier, that part of the Barcelona loyalist garrison revolted, refusing to go to the Teruel front because it would be a "useless sacrifice."

Rebel reports also declared 30 persons were killed or wounded in rioting at Figueras, in Catalonia, and that agitation had been renewed throughout the loyalist province.

Meanwhile loyalists reported that Villastar, southeast of Teruel, was a no-man's land, and that their Fifth Army Corps was holding up a rebel motorized column to the northeast. Loyalist and rebel planes battled over the rebel-recaptured City of Teruel.

Hungarian Offer On Debt Is Called Good in Capital

In an effort to clear up misunderstandings regarding the recent Hungarian debt payment proposal to the United States, Eugene Havas, financial adviser to the Hungarian Legation here, last night denied that his government's offer involved concessions on the part of this country greater than those granted in previous settlements.

He contended that "the settlement offered by Hungary is more favorable to the United States than the terms of several settlements which Congress accepted between 1925 and 1930 after the Hungarian funding agreement was made in 1924. He cited, as an illustration, this country's agreement with Austria.

"Under the Austrian settlement, which I mention because the circumstances of the indebtedness are so closely like those of the Hungarian indebtedness," Havas asserted, "the Austrian government offers to pay in 40 annuities, beginning January 1, 1929, a total amount about 2 per cent greater than the amount it originally borrowed in 1920. The annuities were not denoted as being either capital repayment or interest.

"The Austrian government, up to the time of the settlement of 1930, had made no payment on its debt. If Hungary were now given precisely similar terms to those given Austria in 1930, there would be no payment due from Hungary until 1944, as the payments already made by Hungary have been practically equivalent to the first 16 annuities which would be payable under such a settlement. After 1944 Hungary would have to pay a total of $1,258,000 in 24 equal annuities running to 1969. The present Hungarian offer is to pay $1,207,000 in 30 annuities beginning this year. By 1944 it will have paid $200,000, and would then have left some $850,000 to pay in 24 equal instalments."

Ickes Assailed On Bill to Hire Publicity Staff

House Committee Reports Appropriation With Many Slashes.

By the United Press.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, blunt-tongued Republican who turned New Deal orator, was the target of bitter Republican criticism yesterday as the House Appropriations Committee reported favorably a $124,990,730 Interior Department supply bill, with provisions for the establishment of a departmental publicity office.

The bill, containing more changes than any other appropriations measure submitted for debate this year, was $7,947,557 less than the current 1938 outlay and $2,490,535 less than the Administration requested. It was brought to the floor immediately for debate.

Propaganda Charged.

Representative John M. Taber, of New York, ranking minority member of the committee, assailed the increase in the item for personnel in Ickes' office—which includes the new publicity setup—from $420,000 to $505,000, which nevertheless was $20,000 less than Ickes requested.

Ickes has been utilizing the fast-closing PWA press relations staff to handle departmental publicity.

Waving a copy of the department's "school life," education office periodical, Taber shouted that "every member of Congress yesterday received a copy of this publication—it is the worst kind of propaganda and put out just before this bill reached the floor."

Talk to Britain Assailed.

Referring to Ickes' recent discharge of Undersecretary of the Interior Charles West's office staff, during the latter's vacation, Taber said it was "indicative that he has too much money now."

Representative Roy O. Woodruff (Republican), of Michigan, assailed Ickes' speech to Great Britain Tuesday, asserting the address was "dangerous," while Taber inferred Ickes was attempting to propagandize a foreign people by means of a method more suitable to a Hitler or a Stalin.

By combining the publicity item with the Ickes' office salaries, the committee recommended $85,860 more for those two purposes than was appropriated for this fiscal year. Ickes had sought $50,000 for publicity purposes alone.

Brazil Exchanges A Sea Outlet for Oil From Bolivia

Rio de Janeiro, Feb. 25 (AP).—Land-locked Bolivia won the promise of a railroad outlet to the sea and Brazil, a country without industrial fuel, the promise of petroleum at low prices in two treaties signed today at the foreign ministry.

One accord called for drilling for oil in the Parapiti region of Bolivia and sale of the product in Brazil.

The other provided for the building of a railroad from some point between Porto Esperanca and Corumba, in central western Brazil, to Santa Bruz de la Sierra in upper Bolivia.

Alberto Ostria Gutierrez, Bolivian Minister who signed for his country, said in a note to the Brazilian government that this railroad would be the first step in construction of a line to extend ultimately from Arica, Chile, to Santos, Brazil, linking the Pacific and Atlantic.

Foreign Minister Mario Pimentel Brandao, who signed for Brazil, said on behalf of President Getulio Vargas that the treaties were fruit of the American good neighbor policy.

Further Debate On Pay-Hour Bill Put Off in House

After the second day of confusion on six conflicting drafts of a wage-hour bill, the House Labor Committee yesterday postponed further consideration until next Tuesday.

Chairman Mary T. Norton said a subcommittee might be appointed to draft another compromise bill.

The impasse was marked further by refusal to negotiate with the Rules Committee, which must give the bill right of way before it can come to a vote.

Representative Robert Ramspeck (Democrat), Georgia, withdrew a motion to consult with the Rules group on the type of bill it would approve. He said it might give the impression "we were abdicating our legislative authority."

U. S. Aid Asked For 'Numbers' War by Hazen

D. C. Head Urges Possession of Slips Be Called Evidence of Guilt.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen yesterday urged a new war on the numbers racket in Washington, with particular emphasis directed against numbers playing in Government buildings.

Saying that "the numbers racket can be conquered in the District by full co-operation of citizens and Government officials," Hazen outlined three specific suggestions to aid a drive against the racket:

Passage of a bill, already approved by the Senate, which would require courts to recognize possession of numbers slips as prima facie evidence of violation of gambling laws;

Discussion of suggestions to rid the city of the racket at a conference called March 5 for judges, prosecutors and police officials;

Co-operation by the public and particularly heads of Government departments in supplying information which might lead to arrests.

Hazen indicated that the March 5 conference will also discuss crime problems in general. It has been called primarily to consider proosals for concentration of local criminal courts in the new Police Court building, to be opened shortly.

The Commissioner directly challenged Congressman Palmisano, (Democrat), Maryland, chairman of the House District Committee, in his reference to the numbers-slips bill. Palmisano has said its passage might lead to police unjustly invading private homes.

"Police officials have been asking a tighter numbers law for several years," Hazen added. "I think they should get it so they can have a chance to show what they can do to drive these racketeers out of business."

Discharge of a Veteran Administration employe because he was taking bets in a Government building was rumored last night, although officials said the offender was merely "on leave." It was understood, however, that five colored elevator operators also have been suspended and that 60 other employes are being questioned after their names were found on the alleged bookmaker's list, hidden in a desk drawer.

Huge Wild Life Refuge On Canada Line Urged

Proposing Federal acquisition of lands and a treaty between Canada and the United States, the Quetico-Superior committee yesterday submitted to President Roosevelt a report which required nearly four years of research. Short Haul Laws' Repeal Is Urged

By the Associated Press.

A Florida transportation expert told the Senate yesterday that the long and short haul clause of the Interstate Commerce act was a major factor forcing railroads to seek higher rates.

Testifying before the Interstate Commerce Committee, Joseph H. Donnell, of Tampa, urged repeal of the clause as a step toward reduction of the rate structure. Donnell, representing shipping interests in Jacksonville, Tampa and Miami, was formerly a member of the staff of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Roosevelt Warns Relief Clamorers

Groups which seek special consideration in the distribution of relief funds got an indirect warning from President Roosevelt yesterday that he now has a method of checking up on their needs.

The Chief Executive said at his press conference that the method of counting the Nation's unemployed, used for the first time last November, furnished the figures he required in planning general programs of unemployment relief. Many demands are made by representatives of different age and employment groups, he said, and such figures as those now at his disposal serve to guage the extent of their actual requirements.

2 Georgetown U. Sailors Ducked As Craft Upsets

Two Georgetown University sophomores took a ducking in a frigid Potomac yesterday when their 10-foot Frostbite dinghy was upset by a gust of wind at the north end of Roosevelt Island.

Members of the Georgetown Sailing Club, they swam about 50 feet through the windswept water to the island, where they partly dried themselves by an open fire built by CCC boys until rescued by harbor police.

The sophomores are Harold C. Chaplin, 21, of Pleasantsville, N. Y., and Charles S. Mulcahy, 22, of Chicago.

Self-Defense Plea Made by Landlord

Pleading self defense, Donald E. Stanton, jr., yesterday in District Court testified he shot Ray E. Childress, burly cab driver, only when he was attacked.

The testimony was offered in Stanton's trial in which he is charged with having slain Childress in a small apartment at 69 New York avenue northwest in a dispute over non-payment of rent. Stanton, as landlord, boarded up the apartment.

Yesterday Stanton testified that after he boarded up the partment, Childress battered down the obstruction and struck Stanton with a board. It was then that he shot, Stanton said.

Boy Convicted Of Robbing to Marry Girl, 14

Sweetheart, Near Motherhood, Pleads in Vain for Tippett.

Ellis Tippett, 20, was convicted in District Court yesterday of a holdup to which his 17-year-old brother, Ellsworth, pleaded guilty. The younger boy took all the blame and said he coerced Ellis into helping him.

A 14-year-old Maryland high school girl who said she was about to become a mother pleaded tearfully for the accused youth.

Police said the Tippetts, both of Ardmore, Md., became robbers so Ellis could get money to take his girl friend away and marry her. They staged six robberies, twice attempted to commit others, and shot at a storekeeper.

Ellsworth pleaded guilty to all charges. Ellis pleaded not guilty and claimed his younger brother had threatened him with a pistol to make him help. Justice Jesse C. Adkins ruled that the question of "coercion" was not to be considered by the jury, although Ellsworth admitted it on the stand.

Ellis was convicted, specifically, of robbing a gas station of $27 at 2651 Benning road northeast, on the night of January 12.

The girl and boys fled to Virginia, where they were arrested on the tip received from the manager of a tourist camp.

Roger Robb, Assistant United States Attorney, yesterday said he would prosecute all the charges against Ellis. Neither youth has been sentenced. The girl was not indicted.

WPA-Army Link Scored by Alliance

Vigorous protest against what were termed attempts to coerce Works Progress Administration employes into the United States Army was voiced yesterday by David Lasser, national president of the Workers Alliance of America. The protest was sent to Aubrey Williams, acting WPA administrator.

Lasser called Williams' attention to reports in New York newspapers that Col. Somervell, New York City WPA administrator, and Lester Herzog, State administrator, had been attempting to enroll WPA workers in the Army as a means of reducing relief costs. Lasser declared, "we will fight to the limit any attempt, direct or indirect, to force WPA workers or those on relief into the Army."

War Warnings No Excuse, Hull Tells Japanese

Hull

minder to the Japanese that regardless of their warnings they could not thus absolve themselves of the responsibility for damages if any Americans or their property came to grief.

Secretary Hull pointed out that last August this Government had dispatched a note to both Japan and China, declaring that the United States reserved the right to claim damages for injuries to Americans or their property resulting from the military operations of the two nations. He indicated last week's note was nothing more than a reiteration of that declaration in order to keep the record straight and to prevent the Japanese in the future from pleading avoidance of responsibility on the ground that they had given warnings of danger.

It was later explained at the State Department that from the beginning of hostilities in China this Government has been careful to protect the legal rights and legal position of the American Government, its officers, its nationals and their property. In all communications with Japan, it was further asserted, this Government has insisted that regardless of what the Japanese ask Americans to do, or what American authorities do in advising their nationals to leave points in China, the Japanese or Chinese responsibility, as the case may be, for damages is in no way mitigated.

It was further pointed out at the State Department that its officials ever since last summer constantly have urged Americans to leave China, especially the danger zones. This Government, it also was said, has no objections to the Japanese giving advance warnings and notice of their operations—indeed, such warnings are expected. Efforts will be made to comply with Japanese suggestions for the safety of Americans in China, as far as American authorities can affect the situation. But compliance, or failure to comply, it was added, does not relieve the Japanese of responsibility for damages should such occur.

No U. S. Obligation.

Japan has been given to understand, it was explained, that there rests on American officials and other Americans in China no obligation whatsoever to take precautionary measures requested on behalf of the contending forces for the purpose of safeguarding American lives and interests.

Precautionary measures, it was asserted, voluntarily have been advised by this Government and its officials, and they have undertaken voluntarily, insofar as possible. Such measures will continue voluntarily to be taken, it was said. But, it was further asserted as this Government's viewpoint, irrespective of whether Americans take or do not take such precautionary measures as are suggested by the military, the obligation remains on the military authorities to exert the utmost precaution to the end that Americans and their property shall not be injured. Thus this Government has given notice that it will hold responsible the government whose armed forces cause damage to Americans or their property.

This substantially is the viewpoint of all governments with nationals and property in China and they have repeatedly advised Japan to that effect, as has the United States, State Department attaches explained.

Secretary Hull, incidentally, said that his information indicated that from the viewpoint of Americans in China conditions there were improving. He said the improvement was the result of better command of Japanese officers over Chinese cities under their control.

The Department of the District of Columbia, American Legion, will honor Frederick F. Money, its first vice commander, at a banquet tonight at the New Colonial Hotel, starting at 7:30, under sponsorship of Sergt. Jasper Post.

Toastmaster of the evening will be Thomas J. Frailey, local law professor. The address of welcome will be made by Daniel M. Goodacre, commander of Sergt. Jasper Post.

Addresses wil be delivered by Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans' Administration; Representative Lawrence E. Imhoff (Democrat), Ohio; Capt. Watson B. Miler, the legion's national director of rehabilitation; Lieut. Thomas Mason, jr., department commander of the legion here, and Joseph J. Malloy, national executive committeeman of the legion. Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, department president of the legion auxiliary, will present Money with a token of esteem for his co-operation with that group while serving as commander of Jasper Post last year.

Sergt. Jaspar Post, American Legion, will hold its annual banquet tonight at 7 o'clock in the New Colonial Hotel.

Bunker Hill Post, No. 31, American Legion, will hold a bingo party in Masonic Hall, Twelfth and Monroe street northeast, at 8:15 p. m., Monday. An entertainment program has been planned and artists from local theatrical groups will perform.

mination of the Administration, if not checked, to assume an aggressive role in the Pacific in combination with Great Britain."

Representative J. Buell Snyder (Democrat), of Pennsylvania, declared that "the day of reckoning is here," when this Administration must build up the Nation's "long-neglected armaments in defense preparedness. He urged adoption of military-naval expansion, and said his military appropriations sub-committee would recommend $48,000,000 for Army airplanes.

Leaders Alarmed.

The sudden presentation of the war referendum proposal in the Senate, long dreaded by the leaders since its narrow defeat in the House, gained added force from the fact that the 12 proponents constitute an exceptionally vigorous and able minority, likely to prosecute their case with much more dramatic effect than was used by Representative Louis Ludlow (Democrat), Indiana, in the lower chamber. The 12 Senators are:

Democrats: Homer Bone, Washington; Bennett Clark, Missouri; Vic Donahey, Ohio; Herbert E. Hitchcock, South Dakota; James Murray, Montana, and Burton K. Wheeler, Montana.

Progressive: Robert M. La Follette, jr., Wisconsin.

Their proposal, a modification of the Ludlow amendment in certain respects—declares simply that the people shall have sole power to declare war or to engage in overseas war except in cases of attack by armed forces, "actual or immediately threatened," on the United States or its territorial possessions or by a non-American country on any country in this hemisphere.

Objections Held Met.

Congress is to refer the matter to the people by a concurrent resolution whenever a national crisis is believed to exist.

In their statement, the group asserted that the revised proposal met most objections raised to the Ludlow amendment, declared opposition to it on the grounds it would interfere with representative Government "is merely shadow-boxing with reality," and denied it would mean "peace at any price."

Noting that a majority of World War veterans in the House favored the measure, and pointing to the "disillusionment following the 'war to make the world safe for democracy,'" the group declared that in the Nation there exists a "firm determination by millions of citizens not to be catapulted into future foreign wars by the oversight, decisions or mistakes of any one man."

Administration leaders withheld comment on the measure.

The President's remarks on aircraft and battleship came at a press conference yesterday, when he said that always in the past, when any new weapon of warfare had been invented, an antidote had been discovered for it.

Asked if increasing aircraft effectiveness had not limited substantially the usefulness of huge warships, he said that in the whole history of warfare new weapons usually had been hailed as changing the entire course of offense and defense but that no weapon long remained supreme.

He mentioned the "Monitor," famous Civil War gunboat, the development of torpedo boats in the World War and the use of submarines, and noted that an adequate defense had been evolved for each weapon.

Depreciates "Tests."

Improved antiaircraft and defense air fleets were antidotes for airplane attacks, he pointed out. Of alleged secret tests demonstrating aircraft superiority over warships, he said he had been seeing such tests since 1913, and his recommendation to Congress for a big Navy was the best answer.

Admiral Cook, testifying at both the morning session of the House Naval Affairs Committee and the late evening period, said:

"Airplanes have not supplanted ships, but they have added tremendously to fleet power and efficiency as a whole."

He said a policy of attempting to sink battleships from the air would demand "a terrific, uneconomical and very probably unsuccessful concentration of forces on only a few battleships." He even advanced economy as a reason for preferring warships to aircraft, in noting that 6,750 airplanes would be required to equal the firing power of the present fleet of 15 battleships. He said:

Ships Last Longer.

"The 15 battleships would represent an expenditure of more than $1,000,000,000 and would last about 26 years. The 6,750 airplanes would cost $7,678,125,000, and must be replaced every eight years.

At the night session much time was consumed in committee wrangling over a so-called "aerial mine," allegedly invented by Lester Barlow, of Stamford, Conn., which Representative Ralph E. Church (Republican), of Illinois, vouched for as a "very real thing" in charging that the other committee members sought "to show that Barlow is a nut."

Merriment Interjected.

Much merriment occurred among the spectators when Representative Ralph O. Brewster (Republican), of Maine, asked Capt. David L. Hedrick:

"What would be the effect of high explosive on human beings?"

"Mr. Brewster means concussion from the blast."

Brewster shot back:

"I'll ask these questions. Am I completely dumb?"

As the audience roared, Maas answered:

"The gentleman will have to answer that himself."

Brewster turned to the captain and shouted:

"I'm trying to find out the effect of high explosives. Isn't that your business, captain?"

"No," said the captain, who had appeared to testify on other matters.

Three of the raids were in the 1800 block of Fourteenth street northwest, two in the 1200 block of Seventh street northwest, and another in the 1200 block of U street northwest.

Six of the raids were by a squad led by Lieut. John Fowler, of the robbery squad, and composed of Detective Sergts. E. E. Thompson, Elmer Lewis, Paul Ambrose, J. J. Tolson, D. D. Pittman and H. W. Smith.

The seventh raid was made by Detective Sergts. Joseph Shimon, William V. Christian, Harry Britton and Michael Mahaney.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson said the raids were part of a police drive to clean up out-of-town drifters who have no visible means of support who come here to commit crimes.

A law requiring all persons with criminal records to register with police when they arrive in town would be of great assistance in stopping the wave of holdups, he added.

From 10 to 15 men were gathered up in each of the pool halls. Of the first ten men questioned by police, all had previous criminal records.

Confessions Expected.

Although police had not had an opportunity to question more of the men before the lineup, it was expected that a large majority would be found to have previous records. Other confessions were expected, as well as many identifications.

The police made arrangements to have Mrs. Kathryn Goodwin, 39-year-old Social Security Board employe who was beaten unconscious Tuesday night when a Negro took her purse at Sixteenth and M streets northwest.

She has been at Episcopal Hospital receiving treatment for a fractured nose and other injuries.

Inquiry Is Ordered In Mary O'Connor Case

Philadelphia, Feb. 25 (AP).—Judge Joseph Sloane directed the district attorney's office today to investigate the acquittal of Mary O'Connor in the death of 5-year-old Nancy Glenn.

"You are to discover whether or not improper forces were brought to bear upon any member or members of the jury," Judge Sloane told Assistant District Attorney John H. Maurer.

"It is your duty to place this matter before the grand jury if further investigation indictaes that course should be pursued."

Assails "Bureaucrats."

"The bureaucrats pick their favorities and play politics from one end to another."

Senator Glass said he resented implications that Senators who wished to pass upon appointments were "heading for the pie counter."

"The real pie corner," he said, "is in these administrative bureaus."

The debate was particularly significant in view of the fact that the Ellender resolution proposing a senatorial inquiry into complaints of favoritism in the departments is pending before the Committee on Audit and Control and may be reported shortly.

Senator Norris objected on the ground that it might apply to expert chemists or engineers engaged on the TVA project.

'Would Wreck TVA.'

Charging that the amendment would result in the injection of politics in the selection of these experts, he said:

"The amendment would wreck the TVA. Senators do not have time to pass on the fitness of thousands of men employed in the government. I make no charges against any Senator, but I submit that if he must pass on all these applications he will become nothing more than an office boy.

"Politics must be kept out of these appointments. What difference does it make in hiring a chemist whether he is a Republican or a Democrat?"

Norris finally was quieted when McKellar agreed to an amendment specifically excluding TVA from the provisions of his amendment.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, injected the observation that he would "rather see an honest spoils system than the dishonest civil service system that exists today."

Workers Harassed.

"In some departments under civil service, men are constantly harassed if they wish to do more work than is the general average in the office," he added.

"Civil service as we have it has not been satisfactory, and if I had my way I would abolish it."

Meanwhile, in the House, a bill was introduced by Representative Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, to set up conciliation committees within Federal departments to act on disputes between employes and bureau heads.

The committee would be composed of three "supervisory officers" and three "nonsupervisory officers." It would make recommendations in all complaints to the administrative officer. If the employe was still aggrieved, he could appeal to the Civil Service Commission.

Another provision of the bill would prevent dismissal of any employe without written notice and submission of a copy of the charges to which the employe might reply.

Democrat Slate Wins Approval In Pennsylvania

By the Associated Press.

Harrisburg, Pa., Feb. 25.—A slate of primary candidates bitterly assailed in preliminary parleys won swift and uncontested indorsement by Pennsylvania's Democratic State committee today.

Topping the ticket are Gov. George H. Earle for United States Senator, and Charles Alvin Jones, Pittsburgh lawyer and party worker, for Governor. With them are State Senator Leo C. Mundy for lieutenant governor, and Thomas A. Logue, of Philadelphia, secretary of internal revenue.

United States Senator Joseph F. Guffey, who for a time threatened to run himself rather than see Jones approved, pledged allegiance tonight to the organization slate.

The party leaders had yet to deal with the threatened candidacy of Lieut. Gov. Thomas Kennedy, backed by John L. Lewis, as well as two other candidates already in the field for the nomination at the May 17 primary.

Senate Inquiry Into Maritime Labor Is Voted

Australia, went to the Department of Labor yesterday to ask for information concerning reports that he faces deportation proceedings.

Gerard Reilly, solicitor of the department, told the militant longshoremen's boss that he would be informed of the nature of the charges against him when deportation proceedings are started—if they are started.

Bridges Not Yet Heard.

Lee Pressman, general counsel of the C. I. O., in asking that Bridges be given a hearing on Capitol Hill, reminded the Commerce and Labor Committees that Bridges had never been heard on the pending mediation legislation for the maritime industry.

"It must be quite obvious," he said, "that it is extremely important that the views of such an important organization embracing an overwhelmingly large number of longshoremen, warehousemen and other dock workers be given the committee before any definite conclusions are reached."

Jackson Puzzles Politicians by Hint Of a 'Retirement'

New York, Feb. 25 (AP).—A hint that he soon might withdraw from the active political field was left with New York politicians today by Robert H. Jackson, and there was immediate speculation as to its implications.

These questions arose: Did he intend to indicate unavailability for the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination, for which he has been widely mentioned, or did he mean to suggest that those who favored him should take positive steps soon toward a "draft" movement?

In a speech last night, Jackson, an assistant Federal Attorney General, pointed to the fact that he had been nominated by President Roosevelt for Solicitor General and added that once he took that job "my responsibilities will be more exclusively professional and will not permit me the luxury of political controversy."

U. S. Art Gallery Report Expected

The House Library Committee today is expected to approve a joint resolution to set aside a site in the Mall for a Smithsonian Art Gallery and another resolution to make a national shrine of the home of the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes at 1720 I street.

A public hearing on the bills yesterday developed no opposition, and Chairman Keller called another meeting for this morning to act on the proposals.

Edward Bruce, director of art in the Treasury Department, told the committee that from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000 worth of art collections now in the basement of the National Museum would be transferred to the gallery.

United States Attorney's office since 1934. He served as Garnett's chief assistant and established an enviable record as prosecutor. His name ranked high among prospects during the recent drive to secure a "Dewey" for Washington.

The prosecutor is 46 years old and a native of Washington. He attended local public schools, Central High School and Georgetown University Law School. He is the son of David Emory and Charlotte (McCormick) Pine.

Was Clerk to McReynolds.

Pine received his law degree in 1913 and in October of that year passed the District bar examination. A short time later, he became confidential clerk to the then Attorney General James C. McReynolds. He left that post to become a law clerk in the Department of Justice and was subsequently made an assistant attorney.

Pine left the Department of Justice in 1917 to take a lieutenant's commission in the United States Army. He was mustered out in 1919 with the rank of captain.

Returning to the Department of Justice, he was soon promoted to a special assistant to the Attorney General and assigned to handle Federal litigation in Colorado, Arizona, New Mexico, California and Nevada.

Entered Private Practice.

With the Harding landslide of 1920, Pine left Federal service and entered private law practice here with Col. James Easby-Smith. In 1935, the firm of Easby-Smith, Pine & Hall was formed.

He became an assistant United States Attorney on February 1, 1934. Pine is married and has one daughter, Elizabeth Carr Pine, 14, a student at Central High School.

He is an Episcopalian, a Mason, a member of the District Bar Association, the American Bar Association, former president of the Barristers Club, a member of the Lawyers Club, the Metropolitan Club and the Delta Theta Eta Phi Fraternity.

U. S. Defense Measures Justified, Lane Asserts

Martinsburg, W. Va., Feb. 25.—The right of the Government to take extraordinary measures in emergencies during peace-time as well as in war-time was defended by Preston Lane, of Hagerstown, Md., former attorney general for the State of Maryland, in an address before the Martinsburg Rotary Club here yesterday.

"The right of government in a crisis to meet a threat to the lives and safety of our people is justified, even though it temporarily infringes our individual rights and liberties," he declared.

State commission is able to and will comply with not only State but Federal law.

"Personnel must be selected on basis of merit and left free to work for the aged, the blind and the children qualified to receive benefits under both laws.

"Development of a more efficient organization.

"Audit of existing rolls to bring about elimination of ineligibles.

"Pending appeals must be considered and acted upon."

Errors Admitted.

During public hearings Wednesday and Thursday the Social Security Board introduced testimony that a large percentage of persons receiving old-age pensions were not eligible for them, and State welfare commission officials made no attempt to deny the facts, but declared they worked under great difficulties, which they hoped to remedy.

Before leaving for home yesterday members of the welfare commission adopted a resolution promising to comply with all State and Federal laws; to give the welfare director complete charge of personnel without any interference from any source, and to support the director.

John Eddleman, chairman of the commission, said the commission would ratify the resolution in a formal meeting Tuesday and would bend every effort to clean up the situation as soon as posible. He asked the Social Security Board to send an adviser to the State.

Party in Power.

"While all Federal activities," Senator Thomas continued, "are presumed to be supervised and managed by persons in sympathy with the party in power, yet Federal employes are expected to do their jobs well and then in primary elections to vote as they please.

"State employes distributing Federal funds must come under the same rule."

"The result of the hearing just closed, as well as that of other hearings, is a condemnation of the practice of the head of any State government seeking to use State and Federal resources and patronage to build up a political machine to elevate himself to another political office."

Problem Is Faced.

One important problem facing he commission on its return to Oklahoma, said Eddleman, is to secure additional workers for the welfare commission and give them assurance that their jobs will be secure as long as they are competent.

There is a huge job of re-examining records of about 50,000 recipients of old-age pensions, a large percentage of whom the commission admits may be ineligible, while many thousands not on the rolls may be eligible, he said.

Eddleman asked yesterday that record of the hearing be closed as the Oklahomans had no further defense of the irregularities to add.

Get-Rich-Quick Promoters Will Repay Investor

'Chain List' Organization Submits to Threat of U. S. Attorney.

The line is expected to form on the right at 1020 Vermont avenue this morning when several hundred bewildered "investors" seek refunds from the suddenly defunct District Discount Association.

Closing its doors in the faces of clamoring clients yesterday, the "chain list" get-rich-quick organization submitted peacefully to threats of prosecution under District lottery laws and bowed respectfully to the United States attorney's office.

But notwithstanding the legal edict, promoters of the $640 for $5 scheme vouched loudly and at great length last night for its honest and certain return of dividends. Just to be sure that nobody goes away mad, however, they agreed to refund "every $5 bill in our possession."

95 Cents Gone Forever.

That means that every "member" of the association wh has paid $5 "dues" at the Vermont avenue office will get it back. But the several thousand Washingtonians who paid 95 cents to cover "registration and costs" will be left holding the well-known bag—except for a coupon book entitling them to certain discounts for a number o local merchants.

The Discount Association's system worked like this: Two printed forms, each bearing duplicate sets of seven names, were given to a new "member" upon payment of the 95-cent "registration" fee. When the new "member" signed his name on the bottom line of the form, the person in top position was moved off the list. This new member had to pay the man in top position $5 when he, himself, reached the head of the list.

Names Kept Moving.

To keep the names moving, each person at the bottom of the list was to "sell" his sheets to other persons. They added their names, and the top "member" was stricken off and entitled to $5 in the same manner.

The $5 could be paid, according to rules, either to the association's office or directly to the person entitled to it. It was money taken in through payments to the office, said promoters last night, that will be returned.

The decision of Acting United States Attorney David A. Pine to threaten prosecution under lottery laws came following a conference with his assistants and Capt. George M. Little, head of the police vice squad, and Walter M. Shea, attorney for the discount group.

No Prosecutions Slated.

Immediately after the conference, Shea agreed to advise his client to cease operations. There will be no prosecution, said Pine, because the association operated openly and "has not been furtive, secretive or dishonest."

"As a matter of fact," said Pine, "it was a very close question. It was our opinion, however, that the scheme violated lottery laws."

When first word of the closing was made public—just at the lunch-hour of Government workers—the discount headquarters was beseiged with telephone calls and hurried visits.

Detective Cergt. Chester Stepp, of the check squad, acted as "doorman" when hundreds of "investors" swarmed in front of the building and demanded entrance. Approximately 150 persons remained inside when the doors were locked. They were permitted to leave one at a time after transacting their business, but no one was allowed to enter.

The organization operated for 11 days. Shea was unable to estimate the amount of money taken in, but the number of "members" was placed at close to 10,000.

Under the discount system—if enough "members" were secured—the so-called "investors" stood to win $640 for their investment of $5.95. One woman, it was reported, collected $300 a short time before the closing order was received.

Women Shoppers Indorse Strike of Grocery Workers

The Washington League of Women Shoppers yesterday indorsed the strike of clerks and butchers against American Stores Co., retail grocery chain, as company and union officials remained deadlocked.

Earlier police were called to break open a door at the company store at 2938 Fourteenth street northwest about noon when a man believed to be a picket locked several customers in the store. Customers were held in about 10 minutes.

On complaints that pickets were attempting to keep customers from stores at 614 Twelfth street northwest and Fourteenth and U streets northwest, police dispersed the half dozen men before each store.

Relief Head Slain; Workless Father Of Two Confesses

Hoboken, N. J., Feb. 25 (AP).—Seconds after 74-year-old Harry L. Barck, relief administrator here for 40 years, was fatally stabbed, swarthy Joseph Scutellaro, 36, unemployed father of two children, was taken into custody. Police said he confessed.

Several times previously Barck had been assaulted by relief clients. Several weeks ago, Hoboken's relief situation was called "the most deplorable in New Jersey" by a State official who accused Barck of making "inadequate" allotments to relief clients.

D. C. Woodyard Has 2-Alarm Fire

Fire which started in a truck delivering wood to the Union Fuel Co., South Capitol and M streets, ignited wood stored in the company's yard early last night. Two alarms were rung before the blaze was brought under control.

The second alarm was sent in when it was discovered a truck loaded with gasoline was in danger of being fired. The truck was moved in time.

Tom McCarthy

Impression Of Sinclair Lewis.

THINGS don't happen in a normal fashion when Sinclair Lewis is around. He's as close to an average American as you'll ever see, but he's got the nervous energy of a caged puma. And maybe, that's what gets into his friends. When "Hal" (he was christend Harry Sinclair Lewis) is around, the party's on.

McCARTHY

"I'd like to speak to Mr. Lewis," I said over the phone.

"The room is 854," said a feminine voice. "Come right up. 'Hal' is dressing, but we're holding the fort here. And he won't mind another."

There were four in the room at the Mayflower, and "Hal" was definitely dressing. Even while introductions were being traded around, Sinclair Lewis' long, gaunt frame remained more than a memory to his guests.

Behind the thinly curtained glass door of his bedroom his long figure could be seen in the progressive stages of dressing. And while the conversation was whipped into a discussion of the Chinese-Japanese war, this reporter couldn't take his eye away from the titantic struggle silhouetted against the door.

Clad in shorts, Mr. Lewis raised both arms heavenward and staggered a bit in the darkness created by the boiled shirt he was endeavoring to subdue. Finally, after pausing with his arms skyward he tasted victory, and the shirt assumed its normal role as a cover for the human torso.

A few minutes later Sinclair Lewis, Nobel Prize winner and author of "Babbit" and "Main Street," was in the room. His red face had an even more crimson cast from his exertions.

Polite, diffident, he held out his hand, and then the pacing continued. He wasn't too interested in the discussion of the Chinese War. He moved over to the window and threw it open. Within five minutes he would jump up and close it. He seemed to be always in motion, even when sitting down.

"You can't condemn a whole race," he said, in answer to a question about the Japanese War. And then he relapsed into silence. When he wasn't interested he remained quiet. And he gave the impression that he wasn't too interested in the Chinese-Japanese War.

And when asked about something which didn't interest him, he'd throw out an "I dunno," and let it go at that.

And while he wasn't interested particularly in feeling angry at the Japs, or discussing the formation of the Chinese tongs, he was interested in the things that have made him one of America's great writers. He was interested in people.

"I'M GOING to meet members of the Minnesota State Society after the lecture," he said. "Sure, I'm glad to meet them. Sure, there's something pathetic in societies like that. People join together. They're lonely. They like to have somebody come up and say, 'You know Joe Doakes?'

"Well, Joe Doakes may be a swine. You know he's a pig. The other guy knows he's a pig. But you're away from home. You're both glad you know Joe Doakes.

"Take the churches in New York City. You were a Baptist in Keokuk, and when you can be a Baptist in New York, you've got a tie. You got something in common with people!"

Always, when he spoke, there was talk of people. He understood, revered, loved, hated and felt, only about people. And it was strange listening to him talk, because when Sinclair Lewis talks in casual conversation he doesn't talk like other people.

He has an accent like nothing you ever heard. Born in Minnesota, brought up in Vermont, living in New York, he seemed to combine all the dialects, accents, twangs and whines you've ever heard.

And he doesn't just talk. It's closer to a chant . . . all the words running in together. His voice shoots off at odd pitches, and he carries his head at a slant, with his chin close to his chest like a boxer.

It's a voice, and a delivery which combines the nuances of "Babbit," the man in the general store back home, David Harum, and the tobacco auctioneer. And it's only people that calls the voice out.

"Funny, funny," he chanted, sitting with his hands crossed on his slight paunch, "how people do things to make for the things they haven't. I mean join up in State societies and ask each other if they know somebody back home. It makes 'em feel good. Warms them up.

"Like elevator operators. Ever notice how elevator operators always mention the weather? Funny . . . they talk about the weather. They're caged. Shut up. There, riding up and down in a little black box. And they talk about the weather.

"We don't notice it. We accept it. But I think it's important. I think they're really giving an animal cry for the sun. Silly, maybe. (He actually seems to talk to himself as much as to his listeners, and seems to argue the points.)

"But they try to visualize the weather. They want the sun. Their weather talk is an animal cry."

Court Ejects Angry Mother In Stork Derby

'To Hell With Judge,' Cries Woman, Swings Fist at Attendants.

Canadian Press.

Toronto, Feb. 25.—Mrs. Lillian Kenny, firebrand of the "Stork Derby," was ejected from the Ontario Supreme Court today, but not before she had landed a right and a couple of lefts on the court attendants, who were doing the ejecting.

Fighting for a chance to share the $500,000 baby Marathon prize with four, possibly five, other Toronto mothers, stocky Mrs. Kenny made a personal court appearance in mid-afternoon as the evidence was being taken as to whether stillborn children should be counted in the "derby."

She created a disturbance by addressing remarks to spectators around her and court officials persuaded her to leave.

"To hell with the judge," she shouted as she reached the corridor.

Attempts to quiet the 35-year-old candidate, in the news more than once for punching her husband and throwing things at other persons, were without avail. Shrieking and with fists flying, she was ejected from the front door.

"They're dogs, that's what they are," she yelled.

Dr. F. J. O'Leary, who officiated at the birth of five Kenny children born within the 10-year period of the "derby," told Justice W. E. Middleton three of the children had been "stillborn" as the ordinary physician used the term, although in two cases there had been heart pulsations.

Mrs. Kenny seeks to be included in the group of mothers sharing the fortune Millar bequeathed to the Toronto mother registering the largest number of births within 10 years after his death.

With nine eligible children each, Mrs. Kathleen Nagle, Mrs. Annie Smith, Mrs. Isabel MacLean and Mrs. Luck Timleck have been approved by Justice Middleton as winners. Their claims were unchallenged.

Planter Is Indicted On Peonage Charge

District Attorney Francis H. Inge said the indictment charged Blair forced a colored man, Jim Dailey, his wife and son to work for him for two years. Inge said Blair claimed they were working out a debt to him.

Kidnap Suspect Seized by G-Men

Director J. Edgar Hoover of the Federal Bureau of Investigation last night announced the arrest in Kansas City, Mo., of Karl Clark Strain, 26-year-old window washer and airplane pilot wanted in several States and Mexico on charges ranging from impersonation of an Army officer to kidnaping.

Strain, a native of Fort Worth, Tex., and paroled Federal convict, was seized by FBI agents while riding on a bus in Kansas City late today. He offered no resistance.

Grafton L. Dulany Is Found Suicide

Baltimore, Feb. 25 (AP).—Grafton L. Dulany, 57, socially prominent here, was found shot to death in a third floor room of his family's town house today.

Police Lieut. Louis Klingenberg said a pistol was beside Dulany's body, and a note saying: "I cannot see mother die," and another leaving "everything" to a sister. Relatives said Dulany had been despondent over illness of his mother, Mrs. Walter Dulany.

Slayer of Deputy Gets 20-Year Term

Jonesville, Va., Feb. 25 (AP).—Bob Harris, former chief of police of St. Charles, Va., was convicted of slaying Deputy Sheriff Lloyd Miller by a Lee County Circuit Court jury today and his punishment fixed at 20 years in the State Penitentiary.

Attorneys for the defense offered a motion that the verdict be set aside. Judge Ezra Carter did not immediately set a date for hearing argument on the motion.

Harris on the stand claimed self-defense and testified he shot after Miller used abusive language to Mrs. Harris. Prosecution witnesses testified Harris fled after the shooting and sought to resist arrest.

The Symphony Campaign.

With compelling candor, the National Symphony Orchestra Association puts the question: "Does Washington want its services?" The answer will be found in the results of the campaign for funds which began this week. A total of $103,000 is needed and, the association emphasizes, not a dollar less will do. To prove its sincerity on this point, all contributions will be returned if the goal sought is not attained. Not even solicitation expenses will be deducted, for the campaign has been underwritten in advance.

Last year the association failed to raise its entire quota but proceeded with the scheduled program nonetheless, though on a reduced scale. There was a sense of retrogression, however. So this year it has been decided that unless the orchestra can be restored to full membership, the endeavor had better end. The knowledge that the National Symphony Orchestra operates on one of the smallest budgets of any major orchestra in the country, and with cheaper admission prices, has convinced its sponsors of the reasonableness of their goal.

Unless Washington agrees, the Capital may confront a period of musical drought even more arid than before the orchestra first played seven years ago. In earlier seasons the New York, Boston and Philadelphia orchestras made regular visits here. Only the last can now be expected to come to Constitution Hall, the others having found the trip unprofitable.

The requested sustaining fund of $103,000 works out at something less than 20 cents per Washingtonian. It does not seem an extravagant amount of support to expect from a city which has steadily been growing in musical appreciation. On the contrary, it is an essentially modest request from the orchestra which has so greatly helped the National Capital to assume its present good rating in musical circles.

Minister MacWhite Leaves Us.

Few diplomats accredited to the United States in our times have achieved such widespread and well-merited popularity as has Michael MacWhite, Ireland's envoy here since 1929. He is leaving Washington in a few days to become his nation's first Minister to Italy.

As representative of a country linked with ours by a thousand potent ties of blood and sentiment, MacWhite never felt himself a stranger in our midst. And, in turn, the many thousands of Americans of all classes and stations he met during the nine years of his tenure as Irish Minister and in course of his innumerable travels across the length and breadth of our land look upon him as one of our own. That is a tribute to Ireland, the ancestral home of so many outstanding Americans. But it is also a tribute to MacWhite himself. Few Americans know the United States and its institutions better than he does.

MacWhite's tenure in Washington saw a deepening of the bonds of friendship between his nation and the United States. The same period also brought a growth of good will between the United States and Ireland's once hated foe, Great Britain. But this paradox is easily resolved. The amicable settlement of the Irish question in 1922 eliminated one element of American hostility to Great Britain. Now the triangle of friendship is about to be concluded through a settlement of the problems still at issue between the British government and Ireland.

The outgoing Irish Minister will be very much missed in Washington. During these nine years the people of this city and a large and constantly growing circle of friends throughout the Nation have learned to know him, to relish his ready wit, to appreciate his ability as a raconteur, his political astuteness and his superlative good sense. They wish him good fortune in his new post and Godspeed.

Bad News For Smokers.

Philosophers, from Seneca to Guest, have emphasized that it is not the length of life that counts. Notwithstanding their promptings, however, mankind persists in Ponce de Leon dreamings. For this reason studies recently concluded by the biology department of Johns Hopkins University will have a widespread appeal.

Elaborate life tables have been compiled to show the relation of longevity to various human characteristics and habits. The latter will bring frowns to tobacconists while vintners will only beam.

Smoking is found to be a positive discouragement to long life, even though lightly indulged. Drinking, in contrast, is found to be no impairment to longevity so long as indulgence is moderate. But the most potent factor in determining a man's span of years is his heredity. There is ample confirmation of the old jape that persons anxious to outlast their normal three-score-and-ten allotment should choose their parents carefully.

Apparently Americans have been neglectful in this. At least, fewer persons now 70 will survive to the age of 90 than was the case at the turn of the century. Fewer still will reach even 70, apparently, if they persist in jazzing around Nevada and California in private planes.

Flexible Taxes For D. C.

Hearings on the District tax bill have served the useful purpose of clarifying the atmosphere. They have demonstrated almost unanimous hostility toward the business privilege tax. And they have emphasized the impossibility of devising a rigid tax law that will provide the revenue needs of the District for a considerable period without imposing unnecessary burdens on taxpayers in some years.

In drafting its bill the sub-committee on fiscal relations ought to face the fact that the business privilege tax has proved grossly inequitable and unsatisfactory as a source of revenue. Its worst features might be corrected by amendment. But under no circumstances would it become more than a makeshift arrangement to raise funds for a temporary period. What the District needs is a permanent adjustment of its tax structure to relieve the excess burden on real estate and to replace present inequitable levies as well as to produce additional revenue.

If the committee is realistic, then, it will discard this discredited emergency tax. Such a course would probably mean enactment of a levy on incomes. But Washington has nothing to fear from such a tax. It is entirely equitable, being adjusted to the individual's ability to pay. If the income tax could be substituted for the present discriminatory levy upon intangible property, it would probably be welcomed by a majority of citizens.

Still there remains the difficulty of adjusting any tax that may be adopted to the city's revenue needs. The sub-committee finds it impossible at this time to write a bill that will just cover the unknown deficit in Washington's budget. Even if the 1939 appropriations bill had been passed, however, there would be no assurance that rates appropriate for next year would continue to supply the District's revenue needs. Since Congress cannot be expected to pass new tax legislation for the Capital City every year, any inflexible measure is likely to prove unsatisfactory.

This difficulty can be overcome only by the creation of an equitable tax system with rates that can be adjusted upward or downward by the District Commissioners. That principle has already been recognized with respect to the real estate tax. There seems to be no reason why it should not also be written into the proposed income tax. Congress could approve the general terms of the law and let the local government "plug in" the rates essential to keep the District budget balanced.

In short, the new tax ought to be flexible as well as equitable. A measure meeting those requirements would be an excellent first step toward the centralization of municipal authority in the hands of the local government.

In Philosophic Vein.

Whether or not it is his designation to the important office of Solicitor General, something has mellowed Robert H. Jackson. With philosophic detachment, in his speech to the Young Democratic Club of New York on Thursday night, Mr. Jackson explained why people in the Government service "talk a new language of business responsibility which to some businessmen is strange and irritating." These "strange new words" would seem much less obscure, and decidedly less irritating and alarming, if Administration spokesmen would try, as Mr. Jackson did on this occasion, to show why it has become essential for large business organizations to look beyond profits and acknowledge a responsibility to society.

As pointed out, great corporations today wield immense powers. They exercise a much stronger and more immediate influence over the lives and living standards of thousands of workers and their families than does the Government itself. Consequently such corporations, because of the dependence of their employes, must feel some responsibility for their welfare.

Upon analysis it is plain that Mr. Jackson is still telling business that it must take risks to provide more work for the unemployed, and must refrain from grasping for maximum profits regardless of the effect upon community welfare. But said without rancor his words carry a conviction lacking when businessmen are castigated for alleged failure to discharge their obligations to society.

This time Mr. Jackson admits the difficulty of adjusting the normal objectives of business to the demands of a more exigent economic society. He also concedes that the businessman may be forced by conditions beyond his control to close his factory, while the banker may have to foreclose a mortgage. At the same time, he warns us that Americans "will not patiently accept as inevitable periodic unemployment and destruction of the value of homes and savings to which they have given their lives."

In short, he rightly and helpfully emphasizes the challenge to industry of continued unemployment, without suggesting that our difficulties are due primarily to monopolistic oppression or deliberate sabotage by unidentified economic royalists.

The New District Attorney.

In a very real sense David A. Pine has earned the position of United States district attorney for Washington. When he was given temporary charge of the District's prosecution system nearly two months ago he was literally placed on trial. His permanent appointment signifies that he has fully measured up to this responsibility.

It is well known that Attorney General Cummings, alarmed over the District's "disgraceful" crime rate, has kept a close watch upon Mr. Pine's activities. Because of his keen interest in cleaning up rackets here it is reasonable to assume that he is well satisfied by the showing Mr. Pine has made. It is not necessary, however, to rely upon the opinion of even the Attorney General to appreciate the excellent record which Mr. Pine has made.

When he became acting "D. A." 629 felony cases were awaiting trial. Since that time 296 indictments have been brought in and 19 fugitives have been caught, making a total of 944 cases demanding action. Of that number 508 had been disposed of by February 14, leaving 436 yet to be tried. In other words, the number of pending criminal cases has been reduced by 193 in only six weeks.

If this rate of progress can be maintained, the criminal docket will soon be current. Suspects would then be brought to the bar of justice within two or three weeks of their arrest. It is Mr. Pine's objective to make justice swift as well as certain, and there seems to be ample reason for believing that he will do so. That would be a powerful blow to crime, for it is generally recognized that racketeers give little heed to judicial machinery that operates in slow motion and may never catch up with them.

To make this improvement possible District judges have also been sitting long hours. Likewise they have co-operated with the general anti-crime campaign by handing down stiff sentences to lawbreakers.

Mr. Pine has a remarkable opportunity to reverse the District's reputation as a city of lawlessness. By energetic pursuit of the policy he has already successfully inaugurated he can make the Capital City a model for the entire country in law enforcement. The task will not be easy. It will require co-operation of the police and the courts as well as the public. But an energetic and resourceful policy in the district attorney's office is likely to permeate the entire law enforcement system. Perhaps that is the chief significance of the good showing Mr. Pine has already made.

Schuschnigg's Pledge.

Chancellor Schuschnigg's forthright and courageous speech, pledging his government to defend Austria's independence, is the latest indication that a majority of the Austrian people are not prepared to let the tide from the Third Reich engulf them.

On the contrary, Schuschnigg's unwilling capitulation to Hitler in the matter of the reorganization of the Austrian cabinet has tended to rally all anti-Nazi elements in Austria behind the present regime. That capitulation, it is now reported, was due to an unpublished "gentleman's agreement" which accompanied the accord reached by Germany and Austria in July, 1936. By that understanding Austrian Nazis were not to be discriminated against or even excluded from cabinet office. But Schuschnigg now makes clear that it is one thing to admit individual Nazis to his government and quite another to envisage a thorough-going Austro-German merger.

"Austria," says its chancellor, "must remain Austria." And, he added, "We did not choose our frontiers, but what we have we will hold . . . We are a Christian state, a German state, a free state."

Each of the adjectives has pertinence. Together, their intimation is that for Austria to succumb to Nazi domination would be to surrender not merely political and religious freedom but also certain Germanic qualities which are completely out of key with Hitler's leadership. It is a long time since any German leader told the Fuehrer, as plainly as has Schuschnigg, that the swastika is not broad enough to cover all Teutonic virtues.

How far the Austrian chancellor will get in resisting the Nazification of his country remains to be seen. There is no assurance that Hitler in the future will be any more restrained in his attitude toward Austria than he showed himself to be at Berchtesgaden on February 12. On the other hand, the consolidation of anti-Nazi forces which is taking place in the little state, plus the possibility of a change in the Italian attitude as a consequence of the looked-for rapprochement with Great Britain, may give the Fuehrer pause.

Symphony Orchestra Appeal.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is to be hoped that the public will respond to the appeal for funds now being made in behalf of the National Symphony Orchestra.

In this connection, why cannot the management give us a series of open-air concerts this year like those we have had in the past? These would be desirable from every point of view. Beside providing much-needed entertainment for those who are obliged to stay in Washington all summer they would give employment to the musicians and to others who need work. Also, the winter season of the orchestra would benefit from the interest in symphonic music aroused in thousands of people who ordinarily do not hear it played at all.

Last spring a brief announcement said there would be no summer concerts on account of lack of funds to carry them on. It seems very strange that such entertainments attracting from 7,000 to 10,000 people three times a week cannot be made to pay and I am inclined to think this is not the real reason for not having them. As a matter of fact the 1936 concerts, put on by the musicians in the face of many handicaps, did pay their way.

The National Symphony, asking our support for their regular season, is in a position to provide these concerts, and many of us feel they owe it to the public to do so.

The Negro's Contribution.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May a White Southerner (North Carolina) protest against the revival son that the picture emphasizes the of "Birth of a Nation" for the reaexception rather than the mass of Negroes, as of 1870. Secondly, the bad Negro therein pictured was largely the result of infamous carpet-baggers. Thirdly, the Negroes of the last few generations have proven their capacity to learn as well as to serve.

I place the American Indian, particularly the Cherokee, as first in order of those who have given most to and taken less from the "pool of social good" in the United States. I rate the Negro third and I place seven groups below him and predict that we Southerners will grow a greater appreciation of him. Southerners might read the picture of their own forebears in Taine's "History of English Literature" and the picture of the equivalent of his forebears by Van Wyck Brooke in the "Flowering of New England." Without the Negro, the Southerner likely would have been a "puritan."

I think the Southerner would place a higher value upon the contributions of the Negro, and there would be no music and no humor, no clean joy of living without the Negro. G. G. MOORE.

Eden's Resignation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Anthony Eden's resignation and the virtual collapse of the British Empire as a world power, represents the inability of democracies to face the bluffs of Fascist dictators while maintaining an attitude of isolation, especially at a time when weaker nations are attacked by stronger forces from Italy, Germany, and Japan.

Austria has been forced into the Nazi camp. It is merely a matter of days or months until the transformation is complete—with the various religious and youth organizations submerged (as in Italy and Germany) into the units of a totalitarian state. Christianity will mean as little as it does in Italy and Germany, the church will have as little power, and the people less. Fascism can chalk up another small but important victory.

America is only beginning to be affected by the internal activities on the part of Nazi agents—a pro-Nazi hall is bombed in Philadelphia, a German exile is murdered, presumably by Nazi orders, camps and propaganda cells are established in strategic positions across our Nation, Nazi troops are uniformed and drilled on American soil, and many German-American societies are sworn not only to carry out Hitler's orders across the ocean, but to see that the living and working standards of all American citizens are lowered by the establishment of fascism in North and South America. Under the excuse of combating communism, the Nazi propaganda machine has been aided by various Catholic and Protestant officials, who, thinking to save America from bolshevism, have decided to turn it over to the greater menace of national socialism and the pagan gods of race hatred and war.

Reports On China's Morale.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial of February 24, "Still Uncooperative," is a succinct and forceful interpretation of the present situation in the Far East.

Letters coming from within Japan bear out what you say regarding growing discontent in Japan, mostly inarticulate as yet, but already causing embarrassment to the government.

On the other hand, every letter from China bears eloquent testimony to the increasing unity and determination there in the struggle against Japan. In spite of terrific devastating and appalling suffering, China has not been beaten to her knees. The morale of government and people was never higher. Confidence in ultimate victory is growing.

The last mail brought the report of an interview which Mr. H. J. Timperley gave to the China Press in Shanghai after his return from a trip to central China. Mr. Timperley is one of the ablest foreign correspondents in the Far East.

Questioned regarding the current report of peace talks in Hankow, Mr. Timperley stated, "So far as I can find out, there is no such thing as a peace-at-any-price group in Hankow. There are certain people in the government who would be prepared to make more concessions than others; but even those who belong in this category see that there is no alternative but to carry on the struggle under present conditions, as it seems the Japanese would not propose terms at all acceptable."

The fall of Nanking, Mr. Timperley found, came as quite a shock to many government officials. They have rapidly adjusted themselves, however, to the situation and are grimly preparing to carry on what is now recognized as necessarily a long and bitter struggle.

Mr. Timperley had long conversations with Chiang Kai-shek and reported the generalissimo as saying, "Although we may have suffered defeats on the battlefield, that does not mean the war is over. Japan will find it easier to occupy territory than to maintain a foothold. Even if the Chinese army did nothing, the Japanese troops would still find it an expensive business to consolidate their position against our mobile units. They will find it difficult to keep their communications open."

The generalissimo added, "While we will do our best with our limited resources, we hope that Britain and America and other friendly powers will realize that China is now fighting their battle as well as her own. While we do not expect that they should wage war on our behalf, we do expect that they should live up to their obligations as co-signatories of the League Covenant and other international pacts and help us wherever possible."

Mr. Timperley reported that the Canton-Hankow Railway has not been seriously damaged as a result of repeated aerial attacks. His train from Hankow to Canton went through without any untoward incident.

I know Mr. Timperley personally. Like Edgar Snow he has traveled widely over China, speaks Chinese and is acquainted with hundreds of Chinese leaders. He carefully weighs his evidence and his conclusions are sound.

The Sino-Japanese conflict now enters its second—and longer—phase. Chinese defense is stiffening through mass organization and guerrilla tactics. Japanese military operations are being weakened by lack of discipline in the army and by the increasing economic strain and popular discontent at home.

There are two ways in which individual Americans—apart from anything our Government does—can contribute to the triumph of justice in this conflict and to the reestablishment of international order and peace in the Pacific. First, we can refuse our economic co-operation with Japan's military dictatorship and policy of aggression by a voluntary boycott of all Japanese goods. Second, we can give through the American Red Cross to relief in China. Funds will be used to alleviate some of the suffering among the people of China, to feed homeless refugees and to care for the wounded, and will help to maintain Chinese morale during the difficult months and years ahead.

Poverty And Crime.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Excited warnings have been sounded that the city is in the throes of a crime wave which threatens its good name and the life and property of its citizens. Our officials clamor for more policemen and more jails, apparently with no thought about the hunger and misery of a large part of the community.

Were it not because children in the elementary grades know it, I would believe that our officials have no conception of the causal relationship of poverty to crime. They may get a rude awakening from their complacent deafness to the cries for help from the needy. Human endurance has a limit which is reached quickly when the individual lacks food and shelter.

As a social worker I have seen the explosion of pent-up wrath and resentment of hungry men and women abandoned by the society of which they form an integral part, a society they helped to build. In desperation they have had to use physical force to obtain what was their due by right, or by Christian principles.

Until adequate relief is provided for those in need the Commissioners and the Congressmen in charge of the city government will have done nothing of positive value to correct the crime situation and are, in fact, inviting mass violence. They ought not to blunder any longer.

Another Dewey House.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Harlan Miller, in his column "Over the Coffee," in The Post of February 24, states that the "old red brick Dewey house on Sixteenth street—the one given the old warrior by a grateful Nation, which he later gave to his bride amid national cries of dismay."

The introductory part of this statement is erroneous. The Dewey gift house is in the 1700 block of Rhode Island avenue, northside.

Nightmare.

AS USUAL, I boarded the bus at Thirteenth and E streets, the Chevy Chase Circle bus. As usual, the driver glared sourly at the dollar bill I extended, and growled, "Changertokens?" I pocketed the change, swung into my usual seat, half-way back in the bus and buried myself in my newspaper.

Other ill-fated passengers got on at F and at G streets and threw themselves into the leather seats to relax after a hard day. The bus careened on its way up Thirteenth.

I am not sure when we first got off the course. All I remember is glancing up at an unfamiliar street corner and seeing a sign which read—there could be no other interpretation—"N.W. 13 ST." on one side and "N.W. K ST." on the other. I shuddered, fearing that my most persistent nightmare had become a reality. Then I told myself sternly that I was being ridiculous. Only that morning I had noticed repair work being done on Connecticut avenue. No doubt, the bus was forced to make a detour and would turn up Massachusetts avenue to connect with its accustomed route at Dupont Circle.

Or had I merely noticed that repair work was needed on Connecticut avenue?

I refused to indulge my brain-sick whim by looking up at the next corner. But even the evening's crime-wave story was not compelling enough to mitigate the sheer terror which struck my vitals as Massachusetts avenue neared us, met us and disappeared behind us in a gray cloud of exhaust.

I looked at the driver. He was hunched over his wheel like a jockey over the neck of a favorite. If it weren't the night before pay day, I'd like to put $2 on the nose, I thought, bitterly, and then wondered at my own flippancy.

For the situation was becoming serious; there could be no disguising the fact. The strangest role in the whole mad episode was that taken by my fellow passengers. They continued to read their papers and their little magazines as though everything were transpiring according to the bus line's schedule. Occasionally one pulled the signal cord, but I decided—as we reached Logan Circle and wheeled around it three times before heading out Vermont avenue—that no one ever got off.

In fact, I began to notice that the driver never stopped in answer to the signal. Our only pauses were to let someone on. This circumstance also puzzled me. By this time we had reached a section of the city so remote that most of its residents probably had never seen a Chevy Chase Circle bus. Were the little clusters of people around every "Bus Stop" sign gathered out of curiosity, and persuaded to enter the demoniac vehicle by the same human weakness? Or were they part of a great sinister conspiracy, intrusted with the duty of convincing me that all was well? Or . . . ?

I must have dozed. A tremendous shout awakened me. The driver—his double, rather, for the driver was still crouched over his wheel—was bellowing, "Changertokens? Changertokens? Changertokens?" and whisking a metal contraption back and forth under my nose. When my eyes had had a chance to focus, I realized that what I had feared was a lethal weapon was actually one of those manual change-receivers carried by New York City bus conductors. Too cowed by his manner to protest, I reached in my pocket and thrust one of my nine dimes into the slot. To my relief, the peace offering proved effective and he went on down the aisle. I was irritated to note, however, that he neglected to extort a second fare from the other passengers.

The bus had become so overloaded by the time we entered Rock Creek Park that I feared we might sink in the middle of the ford. But we navigated the crossing successfully. My terror, meanwhile, had given way to wrath at the little hellion who had boarded the bus at the Lincoln Memorial and taken the seat next to me.

When the aisle became completely clogged he nudged a large lady and said politely, "Seat, ma'am?" She smiled, he hopped agilely from the seat into my lap and she lowered herself down beside me. The company-loving brat made no effort to annoy me. He just sat, staring coolly and unswervingly at me, his face three inches from mine. I murmured to myself, "This kid will drive me mad!" Then I realized the palpable absurdity of the murmur.

Dawn came. Something made me remember a 9 o'clock appointment at the hairdresser's. I became desperate. Flinging the urchin into the seat behind me, I clambered over the lap of the large lady. I crouched in the aisle, out of the range of the mad driver's mirror, until I saw my chance. A little cluster of prospective passengers was waiting at the mammal house. We screeched to a stop and I jumped on the treadle with all my weight. Blessed treadle! The door opened, and I believed myself to be safe.

Streaking up Calvert street as rapidly as my enfeebled limbs permitted, I became aware of a horridly familiar sound. I identified it as I staggered weakly into the lobby "Changertokens? Changertokens!" Alternately a question and an exclamation, it was a challenge in either form.

My strength lasted until I climbed the 896-step circular stairway. The shout thundered down the corridor after me. I thought of the neighbors. Then I fumbled for my last dime, pressed it into the keyhole and fainted. JEAN BROWNELL.

Odd McIntyre.

Kansas City.

THIS WANTS TO BE a piece about the late O. O. McIntyre, but it may turn out to be a terrrible omelet, because I never met him and laid eyes on him only once in almost 20 years in the newspaper business around New York.

PEGLER.

However, I do know many of his friends, and I learned several years ago that this strange, timid man with a passion for ham-actors' suits and noisy ties, who hid from crowds but wrote as if he were a terrible rakehell, out rejoicing at cocktail brawls and hot shots all the time, had a bigger audience or public than anyone else in the column business except Will Rogers, who wasn't exactly a columnist in his newspaper practice but a paragraph man.

Rogers undoubtedly topped him in customer appeal, but after he was killed McIntyre stood alone, seeming to inherit much of the personal affection that had belonged to Will. As his own capital in this respect was considerable, he enjoyed in his last years a popularity that probably was warmer and wider than he realized, although his fan mail must have given him some idea.

IT WAS OUTSIDE New York that McIntyre weighed most, and as far back as ten years ago New York newspapermen on the road were observing that people didn't inquire whether they knew Al Smith or Franklin D. Roosevelt, or Jimmy Walker or Tunney, personally; half as often they would say, "I suppose you must know O. O. McIntyre."

There were many in the trade who have never encountered him in any of the places of which he wrote with a familiarity that was largely harmless make-believe, and his hold on his public was due not so much to the little fictions in his copy as to his style of doing, which became an art.

It isn't quite correct to say that he pioneered the field in which he became the greatest operator, for Herbert Corey was there before him, but gave it up to cover the war and never resumed, and Ray Carroll, of the Curtis outfit, of Philadelphia, ran a similar show for a while after the war. But after McIntyre really began to go he was boss in his line, and other syndicates developed imitations which were frankly that and nothing else.

That is common practice, of course, in the canned goods business. One man get an idea for a comic strip which hits, and the rivals of the papers which find it useful all want something like it.

But McIntyre's customers wanted him, and I have been meeting people in Galesburg, Ill., and Kansas City this last week who read him for years and felt a sense of great personal loss when they read of his death.

THERE WERE SOME who said they always turned to his column first and didn't much care what else there might be in the paper and were sad to hear something which his copy had never given them any reason to suspect—that he had been a sick man for a long time, turning out his pieces under the handicap of immurement which compelled him to use his imagination for much of his material.

I knew of people visiting New York who wanted to meet McIntyre above all the famous box-office names that he helped to glamorize.

Like Tad, the sport and editorial cartoonist of the Hearst outfit, who continued his work under a threat of instant death for years and waggishly signed his pictures "Tad, Shanghai," "Tad, London," and so on in bewildering day-to-day jumps around the world, all in his room, McIntyre kidded his readers with a courageous pretense long after he was too frail to do any strolling on The Avenue or slumming in Doyers street.

It may seem strange that a man so homesick for Gallipolis, Ohio, or his old home town in Missouri, who had had his enormous income over so many years didn't chuck it and go back some years ago to set and whittle. But they never go back except as McIntyre did, and, anyway, he liked New York and the ease and the luxury of his life more than he ever admitted right out. And, moreover, if he had gone back he would have been bored sick. You can't put a chicken back in the egg.

I have been telling people out this way that they have more rough-house and more obvious vice than we have in New York, but they know their Odd McIntyre and won't have it any other way than his way, and he was always seeing shocking and sordid things in New York, right in his workroom.

The last line is always a problem in this business, and McIntyre's greatest was uttered with his dying breath when he said to his wife, who sat alone with him, "Turn your face this way so I can see you."

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Our Own Professor Quiz.

Q. Now, Mr. Abernathy, two men wash a car 12 feet long beginning at 9 a. m. They begin at each end and work toward the middle. One can wash 7 inches in 4 minutes, the other can wash 9 inches in 8 minutes. What time is it when they finish the job?

A. Well, I would say they would finish at 9:35.

Q. Wrong, Mr. Abernathy. You don't mind, do you?

A. Not at all; the important thing was to get the car washed.

* * * *

Q. Miss Doopsey, you're next. What is the difference between oscillate, isolate and vacillate?

A. Why, er, "isolate" is the one in the middle.

Q. Correct. You're next, Mr. Dimwitt. "A" earns $1,000,000 a year, "B" makes $2,500,000 a year and "C" can earn $3,000,000 a year.

A. Not under this Administration, Professor!

* * * *

Q. Correct. We're back to you, Mr. Abernathy. Gwendolyn can walk 7 miles in 1 hour. Gloria can walk 8 miles in 58 minutes and Dolores can do 6 miles in 1 hour and 3 minutes. How long will it take them to get from Wilmington, Del., to Miami, Fla.?

A. It all depends on how long before a lone man comes along in a four-passenger car.

Q. Positively, Mr. Sheehan. Now, Miss Doopsey, it's your turn again. Tell us whether the following sentence is true or untrue: The American dollar is worth 57 cents.

A. It's true.

Q. Sorry, but the American dollar is worth 43 cents.

A. Why, Professor, I looked that up just before I came here tonight.

Q. I know, but that was almost an hour ago! Mr. Dimwitt, we're back to you. Is this statement true or untrue: If you drop a rubber ball weighing 9 ounces on the floor it will bounce 32 times.

A. Untrue. It will bounce 36½ times exactly.

Q. What makes you so positive?

A. Well, I'll tell you, Professor. I'm a businessman and I have nothing else to do but bounce rubber balls.

* * * *

Mr. Abernathy, here we are again. Who was the author of the proverb, "As the twig is inclined so will grow the tree?"

A. Edgar Bergen.

Q. You're uncanny, Abernathy. Yoo hoo, Miss Doopsey! What are you doing?

A. Sleeping. This program stupefies me.

Q. Correct! Your turn, Mr. Dimwitt. What is the difference between an incinerator, a percolator and a perambulator?

A. You'll get terrible coffee if you try to make it in an incinerator.

Q. Correct. Now we have a tough one for you, Mr. Abernathy. What is the essential difference between a blotter, a flannel mitten and a waffle?

A. Now and then you find a mitten that doesn't taste bad.

Q. Correct. That leaves tonight's score, folks: Miss Doopsey, 98; Mr. Abernathy, 86; Brooklyn Dodgers nothing. Next Friday night at this same hour come and bring the babies.

'Artist's Right . . . Man's Duty'

German Writer-Exile Calls For Support Of Peace.

Following are excerpts from an address delivered by Dr. Mann at Yale University yesterday at the dedication of the Thomas Mann Library. Dr. Mann will speak at Constitution Hall on March 10 on the subject of "The Coming Victory of Democracy."

By Thomas Mann.

MY MISSION here is to express my thanks to those who have prepared this hour, and to those who instigated it, as well as to all of you who are kindly participating in it through your presence. Above all things, I offer thanks to life itself, which has reserved for my later days an hour so moving, so filled with serious thought, an hour which belongs to those experiences that exceed all the dreams of one's youth.

An American university, among the first in the land, established an archive, a library, where the labors of my solitude as they exist in the German original and in translation, in manuscripts, sketches, outlines, letters, and studies, are to be gathered and arranged in order, together with the contemporary critical expressions of opinion upon my endeavors. The purpose is to permit the friends of literature to gain insight into an intellectual workshop and especially to enable young students to review a life born with the impulse to crystallize itself in word, picture, thought; to wrest the permanent from the transitory, form from chaos, and to make perceptual reality translucent for that which Goethe calls "the life of life,"—that is, for the spirit.

Simply and honestly, this life is the artist's life, neither more nor less, with all its weaknesses, follies and errors, together with its more inspired moments when it is elevated toward purity and truth. Pray do not refuse your indulgence if he, who lived this life and still has the organic patience to continue it, reveals himself as dreamily, fantastically affected by the consideration and sympathy with which the academic scholarship of a foreign land, remote from his own origin, devotes itself to this life and its fragmentary achievements, and by the solicitude with which it gathers and files them, thereby bestowing upon his efforts the dignity of curricular and cultural material.

Imagination's Role To Enrich Reality.

WHY SHOULD this ceremony not appear to me as a bright and amazing dream? I am supposed to be, although in a very personally conditioned interpretation of this concept, what may be called a poet; but to be a poet one should not invent ideas, one should discover the meaning of things. This, it seems to me, is the true function of the imagination; not the invention of the unreal, but the fulfillment and the enrichment of reality through feeling and significance and singularity—the intensification and enhancement of life, in joy and sorrow, through sensibility and intellect.

Thus imagination would plainly be the direct opposite of sobriety. But if that which is called sobriety is a close relation of modesty, and perhaps even identical with it, then the psychological conclusion can be established that imagination and sobriety are by no means mutually exclusive; on the contrary, we must conclude that a certain amount of sober modesty is actually an indispensable presupposition in that reverence for the phenomona and the gifts of life which takes nothing for granted, which "discovers meaning" in everything, and which we usually call imagination. Without this sober modesty, imagination, the reverence that intensifies existence, would not occur, and in its stead a humdrum matter-of-fact and, therefore, unproductive acceptance of life would prevail.

Art's Manifestations Individual Phenomenon.

BUT THE FACT is that in its individual realizations and expressions art in every case begins all over again, from the beginning, in the same way. Masked in naivete, unconscious of itself, without cognition of itself, or, more exactly stated, without recognition of itself, art is born ever entirely anew, for a first and singular random existence. Each one of its manifestations is a highly individual, personal case, and a specially determined, special phenomenon which can be subsummed under the great and general idea of art only with the utmost difficulty by the individual who embodies it. Nay, more, to do this does not even occur to him.

As an illustration, I will tell you a little story. In the winter of 1929, in Stockholm, I was seated at breakfast in the home of the publisher Bonnier beside Selma Lagerlof, the great fiction writer, winner of the Nobel prize for literature and member of the Swedish Academy — an unassuming looking woman, grown somewhat serious through work, but a friendly being without any of the facial stigmata of genius, and lacking any grandeur of profile or pretentious mannerisms. The conversation turned to her most popular work, the world famous saga of Gosta Berling, and its astonishing course through every language and across all borders. "Dear me, yes," she observed, "that al. came about, bu you must not imagine that I ever gave it much weight while I was doing it. I wrote it for my little nieces and nephews. It was just an entertainment like any other. The whole thing was a kind of joke."

I was enchanted with this remark, for I had exactly he same experience, as I told my neighbor, with the book which played about the same role in my literary career as Gosta Berling did in hers, namely, Buddenbroke. This also started as a family affair and family entertainment, the almost nonsensical scribbling of a somewhat unconventional 20-year-old youngster which I read to my family amidst roars of laughter. That the world would ever take it seriously; that this novel, or whatever it was, should ever, to put the matter briefly, be the cause of my sitting there in Stockholm next to the author of Gosta Berling—such possibilities never occurred to us in the midst of our laughter.

THESE STORIES which I exchanged with Selma Lagerlof, I am now telling you to illustrate how famous art, in its individual appearances, never recognizes itself, but looks upon itself as a more or less newly discovered private and peculiar form of play which cannot be brought into any relationship with the highly regarded human enterprise called art, and for which the sympathy and esteem of the world is in no wise expected.

Certainly the originator of such playfulness does not have the feeling of applying himself to a particularly estimable occupation. According to his conception, and for a while he won't be the only one to think so, he is just raising Cain, so to speak, snapping his fingers at the seriousness of life in an irreverential and inexcusable way, and his conscience, as a member of society whose demands are being neglected for frivolous inclinations, is usually not of the best.

I am now describing the Bohemian mood of the artist, for Bohemianism, psychologically interpreted, is nothing but social disorderliness, a bad conscience which resolves itself into recklessness, humor and self-irony with respect to the demands of an orderly society.

The Bohemian attitude of the artist which he never entirely abandons would not, however, be completely characterized if one did not include among its elements a feeling of spiritual and even moral superiority toward the hostile bourgeois society. This element of superiority makes the Bohemian attitude a transitional stage between the first individual playful unawareness of art and the realization of its utterly impersonal dignity in which the individual trusts himself to participate. As a result the irony of the Bohemian attitude acquires at least a double character and becomes irony toward self as well as irony toward bourgeois society.

Life's Seriousness Repeated In All Art.

IRONY, by itself, can be of no service to life. Life demands that it be taken seriously; art, too, demands it. Even in its free and disinterested playfulness, the guise in which the artist sees it, when it first appears in him—and to a certain extent art always remains just such playfulness—even at this stage there can be recognized traits of deep and unqualified seriousness. Early in life he upon whom art has laid its hold experiences the truth of Goethe's words: "Art concerns itself with the great and the good." Life and art accord no gratitude to Nihilism—they bestow no laurel wreaths upon it. Wherever there are laurels, wherever there is love and any degree of trust, there, too, must have been faith and something of that which we call piety.

Ah, but this faith belongs to art itself and scarcely belongs at all to this strange, unique, inadequate manifestation of its inner being which the individual himself represents. And I do not doubt that to every artist has come a feeling of shame in the presence of art, the sudden blush before the masterly accomplishments of his contemporaries and his predecessors. It is due to the fact that every exercise of art constitutes in itself a new and on its part an already very artful adjustment of the personally and individually conditioned factors to art itself. And the individual, even after recognized and successful achievement, asks himself when comparing his work with the masterful creations of others: "How is it possible even to mention any personal composition in the same breath with those things?" How is it possible?

That is the question which springs from the sober modesty of the artist in the presence of art. It is also the question which I feel hovering over this hour, an hour in which you accord my life so much honor and serious attention that you almost endanger my sobriety and modesty. But let that be as it may. It is the least of my troubles.

But there is another that weighs more heavily which perhaps involves a matter of conscience—the question is this: How can the natural modesty and the ironical disposition of the artist be reconciled with a certain unironic, rather decisive and somewhat moral attitude toward the outer world and its social problems? For that attitude has a bearing on the fact that I am standing before you today, in this place, rather than in the Germany of Herr Hitler, where, as a member of the Reich Chamber of Literature, I should be writing what is permitted to be written there.

Declares Faith in Future Of Democracy.

I SHALL SOON begin a lecture tour through the United States in the course of which I shall speak on democracy in numerous cities, universities, and town halls; I intend to speak of its eternally human youthfulness, to defend it against the false claims to youthfulness and future importance of transitory counter-tendencies. And I shall declare my faith in the future triumph of democracy. It seems, does it not, that in so doing, I am leaving the sphere of art and of the artist, as an agitator interfering in world strife, taking a stand with respect to it, and attempting by means of words that were given me to achieve indirect and half neutral, symbolic effects, to influence directly the thoughts, the will and the conscience of men. As if I were a preacher of morality instead of an artist, "a teacher who could help or convert his fellow-creature."

Does that not indicate disloyalty toward the modesty, toward that innocent, first state of art wherein still unselfconscious, it still laughed at itself? Does it not mean that sobriety is forgotten and supplanted by a pretense at dignity and solemnity which certainly belong to art itself, but not to its altogether too individual single expressions?

Permit me, ladies and gentlemen, to close my little address of gratitude with a word of justification on this point. And allow me to direct this word especially to the young people among you. I readily admit, and this I include without argument in every confession of political faith I make, that there is a certain contradiction between, on the one hand, the artist's life, and the attitude toward it and, on the other, his partisanship in political matters, a partisanship frankly acknowledged and actively seeking supporters. I likewise admit that such an intervention in politics comes as a concession wrung from his artistic modesty. But today this conquest of self seems to me to be imperative and I do not believe that I am thereby making myself guilty of exceeding presumptuously the bounds of modesty.

The borderline between art and life, indeed the borderlines in general between the various fields of human endeavor are fading away. There is much talk, today, of totalitarianism and to the extent that this concept is applied to the State, it is terible, monstrous and inhuman; used in this connection, it is precisely the concept against which people like myself utter human protest, the protest of humanity, whenever they address their words to the question of our communal life.

Another Totalitarianism Challenges World Today.

BUT ANOTHER totalitarianism is more than ever an inner reality today, the totalitarianism of humanity, the unity of the question concerning man himself. This question looms above us all as a challenging problem toward which we are obliged to take a stand and from which spirit and art cannot be isolated as separate spheres of interest. "He is a prince," someone says of Tamino in Mozart's "Magic Flute" and the reproachful reply is "He is more than that, he is a man." Just so, today, it may, in fact, it must be stated: "Is he an artist? He is more than that, he is a man." And if in this latter capacity, he should be found wanting and silent, what value would he have in the former?

"Art concerns itself with the great and the good." Well, then, the great and good thing that is at stake in the world today is peace. It is the problem of peace that sets humanity its tasks today, and only in a state of peace can these tasks be accomplished. War has become a shameful and infantile futility, the exact antithesis of all creative effort. The artist out of the depths of his productive instinct is bound to despise war, together with everything that serves it and furthers it, as for example the totalitarian state.

The unnatural and self-destructive behavior of an artist who speaks in favor of war, the horrible responsibility which he would take upon himself, those are things I hate to think of. He is the one who would truly be overstepping his bounds. But to support with one's whole personality, that same personality which took its art seriously, the human and no less holy cause of peace, that, it seems to me, is the right of an artist and the duty of a man.

Fight Goes On

The Crumbling Lines Reform.

A FEW DAYS ago it began to look as if every last barrier to the Fascist tide in Europe was about to be swept away. The dikes were crumbling and seemingly at a very rapid rate.

Austria, gateway to the whole Danubian area and to the Balkans, appeared to be falling into Hitler's lap and with neither Great Britain nor France nor even Italy lifting a finger to prevent it.

In England a showdown occurred between the elements favoring collective security, an element represented in the cabinet by Anthony Eden and those, like Prime Minister Chamberlain, who urged a deal with the Italian and German dictators. The result of this showdown was a victory for the latter group and the resignation of Eden as foreign secretary.

Soon, it was said in many quarters, the impending fate of Austria would be the fate of Czechoslovakia, too. Thus the last remaining democracy west of the Rhine would, perforce, have to capitulate to the Nazis to save what could be saved of her sovereignty and independence. And France, helpless to prevent the collapse of the Europe of the peace treaties, would be forced to drop her pact with Soviet Russia, accept the destruction of her other alliances and join a four-power arrangement with Germany, Italy and Great Britain which would make the republic a prisoner of her rivals.

* * * *

ALL THIS MAY come to be. The course of destiny is incalculable. But it is now becoming plain that the victory of the Fascist powers over their democratic rivals will not be by default.

The events of the last three or four days have revealed those elements in Europe opposed to capitulation to Hitler and Mussolini in the name of peace reforming their lines and prepared to make a stand against the enveloping tide.

Most striking, perhaps, in this connection is the attitude of Czechoslovakia. The Czechs, a hard-headed people, have no illusions regarding their situation.

They are in a vice and know it. But with courage that puts to shame her powerful fellow democracies of the west, Czechoslovakia is determined not meekly or weakly to surrender. She will fight German hegemony if she has to do it alone. But being realists the Czechs also know that when the test comes they may have to fight alone.

In more direct and straightforward fashion than ever before Czechoslovakia has received the assurance of French support in the event of a German attack. To be sure, statesmen's pledges mean little these days. On at least five occasions since 1934 Great Britain declared herself interested in the maintenance of Austria's independence. So did France. Yet everybody knows what happened after Berchtesgaden. But the Czechoslovak situation may be different.

* * * *

IT MAY BE DIFFERENT because the French are also realists. During the past 18 months they have hoped against hope that somehow Great Britain could be made to see that the European situation must in every particular be regarded as a matter of British no less than of French concern.

With that hope in mind the French placed their policies at Britain's mercies. They had no desire to abandon the Spanish government to the tender mercies of Hitler and Mussolini. They did so because London insisted this was better than a general war. They closed their eyes to the hypocrisies of the non-intervention agreement. In the name of British friendship they closed their eyes to much else, as well.

Now Mr. Chamberlain has given the French government notice that so far as Great Britain is concerned Anglo-French relations must rest not on the broad basis of a collective system of which the defense of France is but one aspect but on the narrow basis of an alliance which ignores all of France's allies to the east. Having learned this fact, there is a very real probability that French foreign policy may now be cut loose from the British apron strings. The assurances given to Czechoslovakia are, possibly, the first indications of such a change.

* * * *

IN GREAT BRITAIN itself the probability is that the vote of confidence which Chamberlain received in the House of Commons this week is by no means an accurate reflection of public sentiment. More than one observer has suggested, in fact, that had it not been for party discipline, always very strong in Great Britain, Chamberlain would have been defeated.

In any event, a rising tide of resentment with any program of bare-faced capitulation to Hitler and Mussolini is certain to compel the government to move slowly and circumspectly in treating with the dictators.

Eden in the cabinet was the prisoner of his colleagues; Eden out of the cabinet may prove the powerful rallying point of the large and numerous element of those Englishmen who oppose a deal with Duce and Fuehrer on terms destructive of British interests, humiliating to British pride and, possibly, in the long run, futile anyway. The battle for collective security is not yet lost in Great Britain by any means.

* * * *

THEN THERE is Austria. The last few days have seen in that country a very remarkable upsurge of public opinion hostile to the opening of the country's frontiers to the Nazi steam-roller. And in his speech of Thursday Chancellor Schuschnigg indicated that he was wholly sympathetic with this point of view. At Berchtesgaden Nazi bayonets everwhelmed him. Back home his courage has apparently revived. He may be fighting a rear-guard action against absorption in the Third Reich. But if he has lost a battle, the fight for Austrian independence goes on.

And on the other hand the impression the world had only a few days ago of a bold, self-confident Hitler, secure in the belief in his own destiny, appears to be somewhat lopsided in the face of the Fuehrer's speech to his comrades of the beer-hall putsch of 1923. His rabid fulminations against "international newspaper agitation" and malicious rumor-mongering hardly present a picture of self-confidence and self-assurance. Unquestionably many of the rumors regarding recent developments in Germany have been fantastic. It would be surprising, with the German censorship being what it is, if the vacuum created by Dr. Goebbel's suppression of real news were not filled by rumor.

If Germany is strong, there is no occasion for Hitler to worry about such rumors. But if Germany is not strong, only possessing a facade of strength, it would certainly be very much in order for the Nazi regime to prevent that fact from coming out—now that Germany is in a position to make sweeping gains in the foreign field, and at very little cost.

Hair-Raising Tale

From The

Martha's Vineyard Gazette

ASHLAND CITY, TENN.—How about a hair-raising sea story?

Answer—We can do it. Back in the early eighties, Bige Athearn, of West Tisbury, kissed his sweetheart goodby and sailed on a three-year voyage. Bige had the finest head of curly, black hair of any young fellow on the Vineyard. Six months out he was taken sick with a fever and lost every spear of hair on his head. Bald as a peeled onion, he went on, mourning the loss of his hair which his girl friend had admired, and trying everything that anyone recommended to make it grow again.

Somewhere down around Tahiti he ran afoul of a native doctor, who sold him some hair-grower for two shirts and a jack-knife, and Bige tried her out. It didn't take any effect until he had applied it for about three months, and then Bige noticed a little fuzz one night. When he turned out to stand watch he had a full head of hair. Before the watch was done he needed a haircut. When he turned out the next time he tripped over his hair and fell down.

His hair grew so fast finally that he had to wear a bag on his head to hold it and every two days he would just cut the bag clear, and leave the hair in it. He saved so much hair in this way that he had enough to set up in the mattress-making business when he got home, and neighbors came for miles to watch his hair grow. Bige finally got so ambitionless from this sort of life that his hair stopped growing, and he died, bald as an onion again.

St. Paul's Lutheran Church To Observe 95th Anniversary

Oldest of Its Denomination Here to Complete Nearly a Century of Distinguished History This Easter.

St. Paul's, Washington's oldest English Lutheran church, will observe its ninety-fifth anniversary this Easter, completing nearly a century of distinguished history.

Money for its organization was appropriated in 1842 by the Lutheran Synod of Maryland. The same year St. Paul's Sunday School was organized at the City Hall, now the Courthouse, on Judiciary Square. In 1843 the congregation itself was organized and held its first services in Odd Fellows Hall.

The original church building, at Eleventh and H streets northwest, was started the next year on land donated by Gen. John P. Van Ness, one-time mayor of Washington and the son-in-law of David Burns, one of the proprietors of the city. Gen. Van Ness and former President John Quincy Adams were prominent figures at the cornerstone laying.

In 1845 St. Paul's received a communion chalice as a gift from King Frederick William IV and Queen Elizabeth of Prussia. The chalice has been used at every communion service since that time.

At the dedication of the building three years later, President James K. Polk and Secretary of State James Buchanan, later President, were among the distinguished persons in the congregation. The offering totaled $1,100, believed to be the largest sum ever contributed at a similar service in the District.

The church was the scene of a Lutheran General Synod session in 1869 and thus always will be associated with the formation of the National Boards of Missions foreign missions and church extension of the Lutheran Church, which took place on that occasion.

The increasingly commercial surroundings of the church site resulted in the purchase of the present site at Connecticut avenue and Everett street, which followed the merger of St. Paul's with Epiphany Lutheran Church in 1926. In 1930 construction was started on a fourteenth century Gothic building designed by Philip Hubert Frohman, architect of the National Cathedral. Financial difficulties have delayed the completion of the structure, but services are held on the ground floor.

St. Paul's is the mother of Luther Place Memorial Church, the Church of the Reformation and St. Mark's Lutheran Church, and the grandmother of Zion Lutheran, the Church of Our Redeemer, Keller Memorial and Epiphany Lutheran. The Rev. Henry W. Snyder has been pastor of St. Paul's since 1929.

Epiphany Sets 2d Communion For Tomorrow

Dr. Phillips to Preach in Morning; Dr. Yarnall at Night.

The second corporate communion of the year will be celebrated at 8 a. m. tomorrow in the Church of the Epiphany, featuring Sunday services in that church.

During the opening session the school will spend a half hour practicing the signing of hymns under the leadership of Adolf Torovsky, organist and choirmaster of the church. A fellowship breakfast will follow.

The Rev. ZeBarney Phillips, rector, will preach at the 11 a. m. service of morning prayer. At evening services the sermon will be given by the Rev. Francis Yarnall, D. D., vicar of Epiphany Chapel.

St. John's Church. Sixteenth and H streets northwest. "An Approach to Lent" is the subject of Dr. Oliver J. Hart's sermon at 9:30 a. m. and 11 a. m. services. At both services the choir, directed by Arthur Howes, will sing "Wash Me Thoroughly From My Wickedness," by S. S. Wesley. In the evening the sermon, by the Rev. William C. White will be on "The Unpaid Debt."

St. Mark's Church. The parish will observe the fifth anniversary of the Rev. William R. Moody's rectorship in a service at 11 a. m. Mr. Moody went to St. Mark's from Grace Church, Silver Spring, Md. He began his ministry in historic St. Andrew's Church, Lawrenceville, Va., and is a graduate of Hampden-Sydney College, Va.

St. Agnes. The Rev. Albert J. Dubois, rector, will preach at the morning solemn mass on "Liking Lent," presenting new approaches to the proper observance of the season. At 8 p. m. the rector will preach on "Men Wanted."

All Saints'. The Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, rector, will have "Care" as his subject at the 11 a. m. service. There will be Holy Communion at 7:30 a. m. Confirmation lectures will be held during the Sunday school period at 4 p. m.

St. John's, Bradley Lane. The Rev. Joseph E. Williams, rector, will preach at 11 a. m. on "Where the Fault Lies."

Transfiguration. Services will be at 7:30 and 11 a. m. and Sunday school at 9:30 a. m. The Rev. J. J. Quealy will officiate and preach. Confirmation classes will be at 7:30 a. m.

'What Is This Christianity?' To Be Dr. Miller's Sermon Text

"What Is This Christianity?" will be the sermon topic of Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, pastor of the National City Christian Church, tomorrow morning. Mrs. Helen Turley will sing "Open the Gates of the Temple," by Knapp. This selection was used at the dedication of the National City Church seven years ago by Mrs. Turley.

Thursday evening, at 5:45, at the church night dinner and fellowship meeting, Dr. Miller will present the second of a series of pre-Easter studies in the book of Romans.

Columbia Heights. The minister, the Rev. A. P. Wilson, wil continue the series on "Fundamentals of the Christian Church," with the topic, "Characteristics of the New Testament Church."

In the evening he will speak on "David," a continuation of the series on "Great Men of the Bible."

Fifteenth Street. The Rev. Leslie L. Bowers, pastor, will speak at 11 a. m. on "A Religious Awakening." At the evening service the message is to be on "A Shattered Romance."

Ninth Street. The Lynchburg College Choir will present the musical feature at the 11 a. m. service. This is the fourth Sunday in the Christ-Centered Crusade now being conducted by the congregation. The sermon by the pastor, the Rev. Clifford H. Jope, will be "What Jesus Teaches About His Church."

Third Christian. The Rev. C. N. Williams, pastor, speaks at 11 a. m. on "What Kind of Faith Have We?"

'Fellowship With God,' Sunday Topic at Mount Vernon Place

Dr. John W. Rustin to Preach at Both Services Tomorrow in Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South, will preach at both services tomorrow. His morning sermon subject will be "Fellowship With God." At this service the choir of 70 voices, under the direction of Deane Shure, will sing "Perfect Peace"; the quartet will sing "Thanks Be To God" by Dickinson.

Dr. Rustin will speak on the subject "Is God Real to You?" at the 8 o'clock evening service. There will be special music for this program also.

Cavalry M. E. South. The pastor, the Rev. W. D. Keene, will preach at the 11 o'clock service on "The Church Aroused," another in the series of sermons he has been preaching on the church. At the 8 o'clock hour he will preach on "Gideon and His Three Hundred."

Epworth South. "The Rediscovery of Self" will be the sermon subject of Dr. G. G. Martin, pastor, tomorrow morning. For the evening service at 8 o'clock he will preach on "Realties and the Living Church."

Francis Asbury South. The Rev. Albert P. Shirkey, pastor, will preach at both services on Sunday. Continuing his series of sermons on the questions asked by Jesus and the questions asked of Jesus, his subject at 11 o'clock will be "Wouldest Thou Be Made Whole?" At 8 o'clock he will speak on "Who, Then, Can Be Saved?"

Dr. Carruthers To Review Life Of Mme. Curie

To Return to Pulpit From Which He Preached His Farewell in 1917.

Occupying the same pulpit in Covenant-First Presbyterian Church from which 21 years ago he preached his farewell sermon before entering the war as an overseas chaplain, the Rev. Dr. F. B. Carruthers, of Pasadena, Calif., will be heard Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. He will present a review of the biography of Mme. Curie, recently written by her daughter, Eve Curie. The text will be "I determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and Him crucified."

Last Sunday night this address was delivered before 150 young people of the Covenant-First Church Fellowship. Their spiritual response decided Dr. Carruthers to present the material as a sermon under the title, "The Fragile Weakness of Human Strength Alone." It will be his first sermon since he arrived in Washington February 6 upon invitation of Dr. McCartney and the session of the church to serve for several months as visiting minister. During his stay in Washington, Dr. Carruthers will reside at the Cosmos Club, with daily office hours at the church. His duties under Dr. McCartney will involve pulpit, parish and organizational service of an administrative and national type. During his previous residence in Washington he was wartime assistant to the late Dr. Charles Wood, in the same church.

Central. Dr. James H. Taylor, the pastor, will preach in the morning on "The Church and the Modern World" and in the evening will continue the series on "Lessons from the Epistles of Paul."

In view of the constant need for help in the mission work in mid-China, where the work of the Southern Presbyterian Church is largely located, efforts are being made by all the societies of the church to respond to the appeal for more funds.

French service will be conducted at the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church tomorrow at 4 p. m. The sermon will be delivered by Rev. Dr. Florian Vurpillot, whose subject will be "La Diversite dans l'Unite Religeuse." Dr. Vurpillot founded the local French congregation about 11 years ago and was its pastor for six years. In recognition of this and other achievements the French government conferred on him last year the decoration of the Legion of Honor. He continues as honorary pastor, the active pastor being Rev. A. F. Liotard.

At the service tomorrow Mrs. Alfred W. Sherman will sing, accompanied on the organ by Lyman S. McCrary.

Metropolitan. Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, jr., D. D. of Metropolitan Presbyterian Church, has selected for his 11 o'clock service, "Religion: Repression or Release?" Dr. Fendrich's topic for the Vesper service at 6 o'clock is "Spontaneous Religion."

Westminster. The pastor, the Rev. Harry V. Porter, will conduct the morning worship service, at which Wilbur La Roe, jr., will be the guest speaker. In the evening at 8 o'clock the three choirs of the church will present an evening of music under the direction of Mrs. Carrie V. Byram and Mrs. Harry V. Porter.

Chevy Chase. "Blind Eyes" will be the subject of Dr. Hillman Hollister's sermon at the 11 o'clock morning worship service Sunday.

Gunton-Temple Memorial. The sermon at 11 a. m. by Dr. Bernard Braskamp will be on "Our Armageddon."

Prof. Hammond to Talk.

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 25 (AP).—Lewis Hammond, professor of philosophy, University of Virginia, will lecture on "The Moral Virtues and Sin" Sunday night in McDowell Hall, St. John's College.

First Baptist Will Celebrate Annex Opening

Sunday School to Help Dedicate Its Quarters in New Building.

Special exercises will attend the opening of the First Baptist Church's annex, adjoining the church building at Sixteenth and O streets northwest, tomorrow morning.

The 9:30 a. m. exercises in the Sunday school auditorium, preceding the processional by the classes to their new quarters, will include a "History of the First Baptist Sunday School," by Mrs. Dorothy Winchcole. There will be a baritone solo by Howard Moore; brief address and presentation of the key to the new building by E. Hilton Jackson, chairman of the board of trustees, and response by Jordan R. Bentley, Sunday school superintendent. Dr. E. H. Pruden, pastor, will read the Scripture, and the benediction will be pronounced by Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, former pastor of the church and now executive secretary of the District Convention of Baptist Churches.

"The Sin of Being Ordinary" will be the subject of Dr. Pruden tomorrow morning. In the evening he will deliver the last of his series of sermons on "Timely Messages to Modern Youth," speaking on "Serious Youth Facing a Flippant World."

Metropolitan. The Metropolitan Baptist Church will observe its sixtieth anniversary all through next week. The history of the church dates back to 1871. The church was organized February 27, 1878, and the pastor, Dr. John Compton Ball, will recognize this day, preaching in the morning on the theme "The Church and Its Foundation." In the evening his subject will be "Building a Safe, Spiritual Structure."

Calvary. The Rev. W. S. Abernethy, pastor, will preach tomorrow morning on "Yokes and Burdens." At the evening service his subject will be "Getting Into Ruts." He will be assisted at the latter service by Helen Maris and Clarke Paulson. The Rev. Frank E. Johnston, jr., will conduct the junior church service at 11 a. m., assisted by L. C. Greene.

Fifth. Dr. John E. Briggs, pastor, will preach at both services. At the 11 a. m. service he will preach on "Jesus Returns to Nazereth," and at 7:45 in the evening on "God Rules and Overrules."

Chevy Chase. In observance of the Better Church Program in Education the Rev. Edward O. Clark, pastor of the Chevy Chase Baptist Church, will have for his subject "Educating for Service" at the 11 a. m. service.

Takoma Park. The Rev. William E. La Rue will preach in the morning on "Life's Conflicting Loyalties." The evening service will be under the Women's Bible Class. A playlet, entitled "Ruth and Naomi," will be shown.

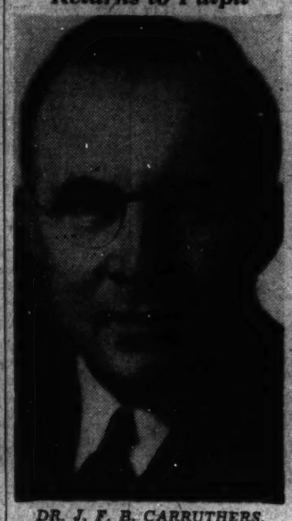
Bethesda. The Rev. Charles J. Sheets will be the speaker at the 10:45 service. His topic will be "Now Are We the Sons of God."

Commemorative Rites Will Be Held Sunday

A commemorative celebration of the first centenary of St. Gabriel's birth—the young passionist patron of Roman Catholic youth—will be held at Holy Rosary Church, Third and F streets northwest, under auspices of the confraternity of same saint, Sunday morning.

A solemn high mass will be celebrated at 10:30, followed by the chanting of "Te Deum" and the veneration of the relic. The Right Rev. Mgr. Manzetti, of Baltimore, will deliver the sermon.

Returns to Pulpit



DR. J. F. B. CARRUTHERS.

Sen. King to Talk At Congregational Evening Service

Senator William H. King, of Utah, will speak in a symposium on "Religion and Democracy" at the First Congregational Church tomorrow evening at the 7:45 o'clock service. Representative John R. Murdock, of Arizona, and Representative Edward H. Rees, of Kansas, also will take part. This is the fourth of a series of Sunday evening patriotic services.

At the morning service at 11 o'clock the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson, minister, will preach on "The Oxford Group Movement: Its Purpose, Its Principles, Its Place."

The Congregational women of Washington churches will rally Monday at a dinner at 6 o'clock in the Sunday school room of the church. Mrs. Howard Stone Anderson is in charge of arrangements.

Mount Pleasant. Dr. George C. Vincent will be guest minister at Mount Pleasant Congregational Church tomorrow morning at the 11 o'clock service of worship, in an exchange of pulpits with Dr. Clinchy. Dr. Vincent is the successor of Dr. Stocking in the Union Congregational Church, Montclair, N. J.

"The Outlook for the American Jews in American Economic Society" is the subject that Dr. Edward Berman, WPA economist, will present in the adult discussion group at 10 o'clock.

Science Churches Subject Is Christ

"Christ Jesus" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the churches of Christ, Scientist tomorrow. The Golden Text is from II Corinthians 4:5: "We preach not ourselves, but Christ Jesus, the Lord; and ourselves your servants for Jesus' sake."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me." (John 14:6).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "It is possible, yea, it is the duty and privilege of every child of man and woman, to follow in some degree the example of the Master by the demonstration of truth and life, of health and holiness."

Sermons Selected By Rev. Marshall

The Rev. Peter Marshall, minister of the New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, will have for his subject at the morning worship at 11 o'clock, "Is Christ Contemporary." On Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, his topic will be "The Believer by Night."

At 6 o'clock the young people of the Christian Endeavor Society will meet for a fellowship tea in the parish hall, with the Tuxis group as hosts. Following the tea, there will be a joint meeting of the two groups, under the leadership of Mr. Scott Moyer.

On Thursday evening at 8 o'clock the midweek prayer service will be observed in the lecture room. Mr. Marshal will deliver the meditation. Following the service, the session will receive new members who plan to unite with the church on March 8.

Bible Class Association Committee Will Meet

Central Committee, Organized Bible Class Association, will meet Monday night, Epworth M. E. Church South, Thirteenth street and North Carolina avenue northeast.

The president, teacher and committee member of each Bible class in the association are especially urged to be present, and all members are cordially invited.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Husbands Philander, Says Man, Because of Wives' Prudery, Nagging, Poor Sportsmanship, Relatives.

The blunt question: "Why do husbands philander?" was put to this columnist and to "intelligent men readers" of this column, on February 23, by a young woman who is soon to be married, who is "much interested in being a good wife," and who desires, "above all else," that her future husband shall be true to her. "It seems to me," she stated, "that philandering husbands could give neglected wives good advice on 'holding their men.' Following is some of the masculine comment her query has evoked.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: "Reader" (the young lady about to be married) asks, in your column of February 23, why husbands philander. Well, here's one man's opinion on the subject. The reasons why they philander are based on wives' ignorance of laziness. Either the wife doesn't know how to hold her husband, or she is disinclined to exert herself to the extent necessary to hold him.

The first field in which such wives fail is in the field of sex. The wife who is not an ardently responsive and adaptable sex companion is lost. Feminine inhibitions, due principally to woman's innate modesty or early puritan training, shatter thousands of marriages. Wives should know how to surrender themselves joyously and completely in the marriage relationship, if they wish their husbands to look neither backward nor ahead. With all the books now available on this subject, books written by Hution, Rosseter, Long, Stopes, etc., there is no excuse for wifely ignorance of the mating technique.

• • • •

Fault No. 2 is nagging (See Webster's definition of "nag: to scold, find fault, urge constantly . . ."). Even among loving couples, the irritant of constant nagging will eventually drive the husband out of the house in search of a companion who never criticizes. Fault No. 3, in many cases, is the wife's aversion to "making whoopee." The most conservative man likes a gay party now and then. Wives should join enthusiastically in such events, with no frowns; no implication, even, of distaste.

• • • •

A fourth reason why husbands philander has to do with relatives. Wives who inflict their families upon their husbands make a tragic mistake. The jests about mother-in-law visits are myriad and trite, but there is a profound truth underlying them. Lack of privacy is a fifth reason why husbands cease to regard their wives as sweethearts. Even the most devoted couples cannot run the risk of boring each other with constant propinquity and carpet-slipper intimacy. Separate rooms and, indeed, separate vacations, are assets to happy marriage.

• • • •

Women should realize that men are gregarious by nature. Wives should know that men invariably make some sacrifice of freedom in marrying, some to a greater and some to a lesser degree. Indeed, from the man's point of view, he always loses something, while the woman gains everything. Blunt, am I? No, the benefit of "Reader," who seems I am simply telling the truth for to be a very practical young woman. And I am indeed, a

HAPPILY MARRIED MAN.

Faithful Husband's Story.

DEAR MARY HAYWORTH: Your correspondent in Wednesday's column (February 23) wishes some intelligent man (or men) to tell her why husbands "step out." Well, I am a man. I lay no claim to intelligence. I do not even represent myself as a spokesman for my sex, but I can tell my own true story or, the plain tale of a woman's heart and how it works.

• • • •

I had been a husband only a short while, barely long enough to set up housekeeping, when, one evening, my wife said to me: "You would seem more of a man if you smoked. There is nothing to reform about you. You do not drink or smoke. You are not temperamental. One always knows how you will react to any situation. You will say the correct thing and cut the correct caper. It makes you deadly dull. You do not even philander. You give me no cause to be jealous. You are the same yesterday, today, and, apparently, forever."

• • • •

"My dear," I replied, "I have been a gay deceiver. I really can do all those interesting things. I will reform at once and enter upon a delirious career which will give you thrills and heartaches." So saying, I went to the store and returned with cigarettes and the wherewithal to make a potent drink. My wife was in another part of the house at the time I returned, so I took an easy chair, put my feet in another, and proceeded to smoke and imbibe in comfort.

• • • •

Hearing steps at the door, I shouted: "Why in h—— don't you come in and shut that d——d door?" There was a gasp and I turned to face my esteemed mother-in-law. She was flabbergasted and sank into a chair to recover. Then the humor of the situation appealed to her and she laughed hysterically. Just then my better half appeared on the scene and remarked: "You really do not need to smoke, since it is such hard work for you."

• • • •

My mother-in-law was reconciled and became my best friend. I have had no temptation to stray from the deadly dull path of perfect marital rectitude, simply because straying, to one of my temperament, comes under the head of hard work. After that one tentative outburst, my wife and I settled down to routine domesticity. But the moral, if any, of this tale is, I guess—let the ladies take warning and marry the Don Juans rather than the deadly dull fellows like myself, who give no occasion for the exercise of the feminine talent for reformation.

DEADLY DULL.

Early Pihlosophers' Theory.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: It seems to me that the ancient philosopher had a theory which undertook to explain why husbands philander and wives flirt, long after they have pledged exclusive devotion to each other. Some ancient god cleaved the complete human being asunder, as punishment for some wrongdoing, so that thereafter the masculine and feminine halves of that once-complete whole were constantly seeking to find, and to be reunited with, their perfect complement.

That, symbolically, at least, is what the restless husband is seeking in his flirtations and infidelities with other women than his wife. He is seeking the qualities of mind and heart and being he has not found, in satisfactory quantity, in his wife. Poor fool, he doesn't know he is chasing a mirage, an illusion; that no woman is perfect; that every lovely lady is a package of virtues and shortcomings, and that the better part of wisdom—learned too late, in most cases—is to make the best of what you have. The fellow who swaps horses in mid-stream is never much better, and often much worse off, then he was before. Anyhow, that's the way I see it.

Clever Hats Adapted From "The Seven Dwarfs"

Milliner Urges Women to Drop 'Silly Hat' Fad

Predicts New Spring Styles Will Stress Femininity and Charm.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

"IF YOU WANT to keep your husband, wear young-looking hats—not silly, but becoming styles which are definitely youthful appearing."

It was Florence Reichman, noted American designer speaking, in her salon in New York, and as she expounded her theories of hat designing and hats versus the people who wear them, she supervised the draping, shaping and trimming of at least a half dozen new spring models.

Florence Reichman.

"My new hats are not modern and utilitarian, a product of the machine age," she commented with emphasis. "They are dripping with allure and femininity."

Mrs. Reichman said that she believed sincerely that women were tired at the moment, of being independent, trim, tailored and somewhat masculine, and that they had re-discovered the sweetness of being looked after and made love to—they now want hats that will call for their escort's admiration instead of laughter.

Concentrates on Charm.

"I am one milliner who is going to concentrate on this new idea of charm for a season at least and see how it works," Mrs. Reichman explained while she demonstrated her point with creations which stressed this idea.

"Flattering little brims that look like sailors in front but cling with the tenacity and depth of a calot in back and adorned with old-fashioned hat pins, veils and flowers are just as romantic for 1938 as they were in the late nineteenth century," this authority pointed out.

"Gay little flower toques and demure bonnets which cling to the back of one's head and reveal saucy curls atop one's forehead, have the same allure for the modern woman as they did in great-grandmother's day," she exclaimed, as she tried several on for our perusal.

The straw braids, ribbons and fabrics that are considered smart this spring are so new in color and texture and so outrageously gay and extravagant, Mrs. Reichman told us, they are making fashion news—they are utterly different from anything that has been used for hats in years.

"With the hats made of these new braids which are so lovely in themselves," Mrs. Reichman said, "trimming is used discreetly and silhouettes are rather classic in design.

osed at Dashing Angles.

"Novelty ribbons, small flowers combined in nosegay effects, wings posed at dashing angles, and veils in flattering new arrangements, are the most popular methods of chapeau adornment this spring. Bonnet types, worn differently than former years, are also among the Reichman collection for spring. High bonnets with narrow sides and bloused brims with bonnet effects, add a new angle to the off-the-face silhouette," she pointed out.

Contrary to many designers, Mrs. Reichman does not like the brushed-up coiffure with hats. "In my estimation, it is not as young looking as a soft roll or curls at the nape of the neck," she said. "Consequently I am designing (with few exceptions), hats with deep backs, veil snoods, ribbon and fabric arrangements, to hold them securely on the head, and break that ugly line between a shallow hat and a long bob."

"Encourage men to help you shop for a hat," Mrs. Reichman advised, "and if your husband, brother or boy friend doesn't like your hats, don't wear them."

Impudent and clever is this high-sweeping hat made of the palest blue antelope with flat peaked crown and rolled brim. A youthful, all-occasion hat.

Shoes That Fit Aid to Posture

Actress Says Foot Comfort Is the Basis of Grace.

MARGARET LINDSAY would have been a dancing teacher if she hadn't made good on the screen. Her carriage and posture are those of a girl who knows what every muscle in the body is capable of doing, and who makes the most of them. Therefore when she says that good posture is all based on foot comfort and graceful footwork the statement bears weight.

Margaret believes people should buy shoes with infinite care. They should have the proper support, fit well and never, never have heels that are too high nor toes that cramp. And it is just as important that stockings not be too short, because this too can make the foot very uncomfortable. Margaret further advises people to change their shoes at least once during the day, and to beware of run-over heels.

If in spite of this shoe care, feet are still uncomfortable, Margaret suggests frequent massages with a good oily cream, or in some cases with witch hazel. A good arch-building exercise is the carrying of marbles with the toes or the rising on tiptoe exercises.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Feb. 25.

WHO REPRESENTS the greatest power, broadly speaking, in the life of a great city such as ours? Do you say the mayor and board of selectmen, or the president of the Farmers' National Bank or Miss Hattie, the leading seamstress? If so, you are in mortal error. The greatest personal factor in New York today, metropolitan journalism and the modern fetich for personal publicity being what they are, is the corps of newspaper cameramen!

ALICE HUGHES

They possess unlimited power to bless or damn, these alert and cynical shutter-snappers! Does a reigning movie queen or society grenadier give them the profane shove or the refined repulse when they are at work, she would be better dead, so ghastly can be the photographer's revenge. He has a longer memory than the elephant—he never forgets a snub or a push. The snooty movie star he will waste no more plates on, allowing her to come into a depot utterly unheeded, and thus depriving her of the publicity on which her salary and ego feed. He'll wait for weeks to catch the socialite in the most unflattering pose, scratching her nose or with her mouth open to receive a forkful of ham and eggs.

And so, when the lens boys gave their annual ball at the Commodore a week ago, the whole town turned out with a will. It's my favorite big party of the year, for all my pals are on hand, and it's terrific fun. And do the camera lads get action! Naturally, all the Broadway stars are asked to entertain, and it's a command performance. And now that the glamor debutantes are made, unmade and remade by pictures on the society pages, the girls form a committee to help the brawl along, headed this year by such toppers as Martha Hall, Esme O'Brien and Eileen Herrick, New York, these days, offends almost anyone, including the family pastor, but it's always "yes, sir" and "thank you!" to the all-important newspaper photographer—else we'll just be a dark smudge behind a rubber plant!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Don't go to sleep in the stockade, or the red Indians will bust in! And now that the competition is so furious here, the No. 1 glamor deb mustn't turn her back, or Schillingfurst." Long before, she can say "Princess Hohenlohe-Schillingfurst." Long before, Take Gloria "Mimi" Baker, the voluptuous young beauty who queened it all fall. No sooner had she shoved off on a world cruise then she lost her job as top girl for the season, and now little Esme O'Brien, all of 17 and cute as they come, fills the spotlight, the society pages and the picture magazines. Esme heads all committees, boards and Kaffee Klatches of her classy set, while the unhorsed "Mimi" peers at Indian temples. But she had her day, and probably sailed away to escape the public goose-greasing.

• • • •

Ruth Merzon, of this city, has whipped the bra situation for bathing belles—those cussed straps, you know—by building a holder-upper into the bathing suit itself—a thrilling feat of engineering. Ruth has struck a mighty blow for the beauty of the hot sands of America, and will probably get a Congressional medal for it.

• • • •

Never have we had such a winter for Ranees here. No sooner had the Ranee of Sarawak shoved away for London than up pops the Ranee of Pudukota, probably some Indian whistle-stop, dressed in elegant clothes. Mere duchesses are getting a faint nod, for the folks sense something so exotic about a Ranee! . . . The Countess Dorothy di Frasso, social sponsor of Hollywood's beauteous boys and girls who handle their table-tools properly, sneers at Recessions by switching from the old red fox coat to a little sable number. The country is safe! . . . Aren't you all cheered up?

A committee of our Board of Education has just decided the boys and girls are still too grubby around the neck and ears, and propose to improve the washing facilities at our public education mills. The cost for more soap and towels? Oh, about $400,000! Cleanliness is next to what, did you say?

A local clothes-confector has just recognize the "rolling home" by designing a new trailer-suit for the spring. It's made of denim, either in mattress-ticking stripe or some rich solid color. It's a suspended overall, with a fitted bustline and short-sleeved jacket. Oh yes, the girls get practical, now and then!

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

News of the Day.

SHE FELT the usual slight tightening at her heart as she picked up the morning paper. The big black headlines sprung out at her ominously. "HITLER" . . . "JAPAN" . . . "SPAIN" . . . "EDEN" . . . "NAVAL BILL" . . . Always the same words! Could one never escape them?

She hastily turned the page. She would look at the fashions, the advertisements . . . No, here were Spanish veils, Marie Antoinette dresses . . . a Chinese benefit tea . . . even in the book reviews—the recurring phrase, "the next war."

She threw down the paper. Well, after all, America was not in it. Didn't Tom, didn't everybody, say no nation could attack us? And if we had just sense enough to stay home and mind our own business . . . Still, they said that before. They always said it.

• • • •

But . . . well even if this country did get into it—why there wasn't anything for her to worry about . . . That was personally. Tom was 40 . . . both her children were girls. There was little George, her nephew . . . well he was only 6 . . . surely in 15 years they'd get things straightened out . . . somehow. Cousin Lucy's two boys were in their 20's . . . but they were married, thank heaven. No, she really didn't know intimately anyone who might be affected . . . Still.

She turned on the radio. An unctuous masculine voice filled the room. "And now today we find the foreign situation further complicated by" . . . She hastily shut it off.

She was getting jumpy on the subject, she told herself. Well, it was the way they all talked. Like the women at Marjorie Potter's tea yesterday. "Isn't it terrible about Hitler . . . yes, I will take one of those little pigs in blankets" . . . "I do hope there won't be another war. Jack says" . . . "Did you hear about Gladys? They're moving Harold to San Diego and she doesn't know a soul there."

Then the man at the newsstand. "Well, it certainly looks like there's going to be trouble in Europe." Every morning he said it so cheerily, almost eagerly. Even Tom . . . She had found herself every night busily keeping him talking about guppies, Joe Louis, fishing tackle, stamps, anything, so he wouldn't start walking up and down the room telling what was the matter with Chamberlain and Eden.

Well, she couldn't go on letting this thing get on her nerves. Why on earth should she feel so guilty? . . . What could she do about it? She was only one . . . and a woman. That was it! Only a woman! The old-timers had the right idea. Women weren't supposed to worry about such things. It was their job to make the home happy . . . to keep themselves fresh, smiling and pretty and—well, if the worst came, to sew bandages.

That was it. She would just leave it all to Tom. She would be a good wife and mother . . . a lovely, feminine, charming woman . . . just fulfill her job graciously and accept bravely whatever came.

It was only 10 o'clock. She might as well go downtown and look around for a bright print dress. Her clothes were getting a little shabby. And she might get some of that new cologne that was half perfume.

• • • •

Downtown she felt gay and happy again. The sun was shining, glistening motor cars sailed by, crowds swung briskly along the sidewalks. Everywhere was light, energy, movement. Caught in the current of it she felt buoyant, invincible.

Just then a raucous shout . . . then another . . . a chorus. "READ ABOUT GERMANY" . . . "HITLER THREATENS!" . . . "CHINESE CITY BOMBED!"

It all came to her in a flash on the way home. Street cars often did that to her, also trains, any kind of movement. A sudden clearness . . . a shining path. "The will to power" . . . the will to peace. A something within her . . . within everybody. No, not what speakers meant when they said get on with your neighbors. It was something deeper, more glowing, a flame of faith . . . mightier than a sword.

At home she picked up the afternoon paper with a great calm. The big black headlines did not frighten her, did not accuse her. There was something she could do.

Couples May Fly On Single Fare

More Air-Minded Wives Drag Mates Into Planes.

The wives of America are becoming air-minded since the policy of travel by air on a singe fare has been adopted by the airlines.

A husband and wife leaving Washington before February 28 can fly as far as Los Angeles on American Airlines for the price it would ordinarily cost either of them to go to the West Coast by plane. While they must buy their tickets together, they may leave or return separately until March 9.

Many persons who have not flown before are now having their first ride in an airplane.

Married couples on their first flights have varying reactions; some of them are nervous, some excited, and some worried.

Women in general have been more eager to fly than their husbands, who frequently have to be coaxed into the adventure. However, after taking their first flight, people usually are sold on air travel and begin to use planes on their business and pleasure trips.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

By Ida Jean Kain.

RHEUMATISM is what you get from sitting in rocking chairs. In fact, that's what you get for sitting in them!

And there, in no uncertain terms, is what Hanya Holm thinks of the whole business of growing old. This famous leader of the modern dance, however, believes in clinching an argument.

A glimpse of this firebrand of rhythm in action would show you what she means. She has the figure of a Greek goddess, and age never was any problem to the Greek goddesses. But, as might be pointed out, Miss Holm is young to serve as an example of agelessness and you may be interested in one of her pupils who is 76 years old. This dance enthusiast enters into the spirit of things with the bounce and abandon of a 6-year-old and has a figure that would do credit to a woman half her age.

Warm Up This Way.

A warming-up measure in the dance is to stand with feet fairly wide apart, hands down at sides, knees straight, and bounce! Do not bend the knees. Spring up and down rhythmically, getting yourself several inches off the floor and coming down with a bounce, not a thud! This is good exercise. The 76-year-old dancer can do it 50 times. Can you?

Stretching the leg muscles is an important exercise in the modern dance and will prevent those muscles along the backs of the legs from becoming foreshortened. Miss Holm says it will keep you from becoming stiff-kneed and rheumatic. Here is the way she tells you to do it: Sit down on the floor, legs wide apart, knees straight. Keeping the back straight, lean over and grasp the right foot in both hands and pull your trunk down toward your toes. It hurts? Then it is just what you need, because unless those muscles were short this stretch would not hurt. Try it with the other leg, and then change the exercise. Instead of bringing the torso down to the foot, lift the foot and try to touch the forehead with the instep. Of course, keep the knees straight!

There you have a combination of exercises for legs, abdominal muscles and back muscles. The idea is to have back straight and knees straight. You may also lie back flat on the floor and raise the straight leg toward the head in an attempt to touch the forehead. Alternate the legs and make your movements rhythmical.

Another exercise which may cause you to feel for broken bones is this one. Get into position by standing on the knees, which are rather wide apart, on the floor. Then sit back between the legs and on the floor. Do not sit on the feet. They should be tucked back and out at the sides of the body. Hold the arms straight out from the sides, and move the body forward from the hips. Come as close to the floor as you can without falling on your face, then move backward until you are sitting upright, but between the legs, as in the first position.

In dancing, the aim is to develop rhythm and grace—not to exercise! And in exercise the aim might well be to retain the youthful and beautifully proportioned figure of a dancer. Incorporate these dance movements in your figure program.

A Critique of Thomas Mann

BY AGNES E. MEYER

Thomas Mann has just written "Joseph In Egypt." Mrs. Meyer's article reviews this new book and analyzes the development of the author of "Buddenbrooks" and "The Magic Mountain."

Mrs. Keyes Set to Wear 'Heirloom Wedding Dress'

Henry Wilder Keyes, Jr., Is Engaged to Betty Louise Main, of Denver; Will Be Married in Colorado.

Frances Parkinson Keyes (Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes), author and editor, will have a chance to wear her "heirloom wedding dress" again this year. From the West comes news of betrothal of Miss Betty Louise Main, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Main, of Denver, and Henry Wilder Keyes, jr., son of former Senator Keyes, of North Haverhill, N. H., and Mrs. Keyes, of Washington and North Haverhill.

Last June, when the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Keyes married Miss Louise Burleigh McNeil, of Boston, Mrs. Keyes attended the wedding gowned in black Chantilly lace that had been in her family four generations. Each owner had worn it to the wedding of her daughter. Mrs. Keyes decided to continue the tradition, despite the fact she has no daughters, so she appeared in it at the wedding of her son.

This year, there will be an opportunity to wear it again, at the marriage of her eldest son and Miss Main, in Denver, either in the spring or early summer.

the Gibbs School in Boston, and Smith College. Her fiance, who has spent much time in Washington and has many friends here, attended Milton Academy and is a graduate of Harvard College and Harvard Law School. He is a member of the bar in New Hampshire and Massachusetts and has been admitted to the United States Supreme Court, and is connected with the Boston law firm of Sherburne, Powers & Needham. His fraternal affiliations include membership in the Speakers Club, the Harvard Club of Boston and the Union Boat Club.

Mrs. Keyes left Washington yesterday for New York and will go from there to Boston, where she will join her husband and other members of her family for the week-end. Miss Main, who is now in Boston, and her father, will be among guests at a dinner to be given tonight by Mr. and Mrs. Keyes in honor of the engaged couple.

Mr. Main, a graduate of Dartmouth, was formerly president of the alumni association of that school. He and others in the family have been connected with Dartmouth as members of the Keyes family have been with Harvard.

Miss Helen Earle Completes Nuptial Plans

Miss Helen Earle, whose marriage to Lieut. Royal R. Ingersoll, U. S. N., will take place March 5, has chosen Miss Sallie B. Crenshaw as her maid of honor. Miss Earle is the daughter of Capt. John B. Earle, U. S. N., and Mrs. Earle, while the prospective bridegroom is the son of Capt. Royal E. Ingersoll, U. S. N., and Mrs. Ingersoll.

The bride-elect's other attendants will be Miss Alice Ingersoll, sister of Lieut. Ingersoll; Miss Mary Osborn, of New York City; Miss Marie Tawresey, Miss Barbara Deibert and Miss Julie Camp.

Lieut. William Church will be best man.

Mrs. Arthur Deibert, aunt of the bride, will entertain the bridal party at a dinner, March 4, the eve of the wedding.

The ceremony, which will be performed in All Saints Church at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon by the Rev. Henry Teller Cocke, will be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents in Chevy Chase.

Mexican Envoy Host at Dinner

The Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera entertained last evening at another of the series of dinners they have been giving of late.

Their guests were the Ambassador of Peru, Manuel de Freyre y Santander; the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil; the Ambassador of Chile, Manuel Trucco, and his daughter, Miss Marta Trucco; the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy and Senora de Baron; the Assistant Director of the Pan American Union and Senora de Alba; Dr. and Mrs. Francis Tudela; Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Healy, Mrs. Matthew Hanna, who leaves today to join her mother in Germany; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Burke, Miss Margaret Delano Gage, and the legal Counselor of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Cordova.

Dr. Jose Manuel Puig Casauranc, who was Ambassador from Mexico to the United States from 1930 to 1932, has returned with his wife to Washington and they are stopping at the Roosevelt. They were very popular during their stay here and there will no doubt be numerous parties held in their honor.

Elizabeth Kaufman To Become Bride Of F. J. Bashwitz

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Kaufman announce engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth Ann, to Frederick J. Bashwitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Bashwitz, of New York City. Mr. Bashwitz is now making his home in Washington.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon.

AT THIS DRAB TIME of year, when all the parties seem to boast the same faces, news of visitors to Washington is refreshing. The next few weeks will see a veritable influx of said visitors, and, Lent or no Lent, their arrival is sure to be the signal for a flurry of parties.

DUDLEY HARMON

It will be good news to social circles that Jonkheer and Mme. van Swinderen, of London, are coming to visit Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover. Mme. van Swinderen is a daughter of Mrs. Glover and a sister of Charles Carroll Glover, jr., who, with Mrs. Glover, is extremely popular in Capital society. The Van Swinderens will sail March 6 and will probably reach Washington the middle of the month on their pleasure trip. Jonkheer van Swinderen was formerly Minister of the Netherlands to London, and he and his wife have continued to make their home in the British capital.

* * * *

THE CHIC AND ATTRACTIVE Mme. Simopoulos, wife of a former Greek Minister here, will arrive in Washington on Wednesday for a visit. During her sojourn she will be at the Mayflower.

Mme. Simopoulos is a wizard at bridge, and no doubt this game will figure prominently in the parties given in her honor here.

* * * *

ARRIVING ON THURSDAY to visit the Morris Clarks are the Thomas Clarkes (no relation), of Darien, Conn. Mrs. Clarke is French and Mr. Clarke was formerly married to Elsie Ferguson, the actress. The Washington Clarks have a summer home in Darien.

The visitors will remain about a week and on Saturday evening, March 6, their hosts will give a small dinner for them, with others dropping in afterwards.

THE MUCH HERALDED VISIT of the Richard Porter Davidsons has finally come to pass. They are spending the week-end with his sister, Miss Louise Davidson, en route to their home in Cooperstown, N. Y., from a trip to the South . . . Mrs. Armistead Davis' cocktail party today is in honor of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Morton Hutchinson, of Canada, who are visiting here . . . The United States Minister to Switzerland and Mrs. Leland Harrison will leave on Tuesday after a week of hectic gayety here. They will spend several days in Philadelphia before going on to New York, whence they will embark for Geneva . . . Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins entertained at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon at her residence on R street.

ANTHONY DE BALASY, Counselor of the Hungarian legation, has returned after a vacation trip to South America. He went on the cruise on which the good ship Normandie departed from New York several weeks ago.

Last evening Mr. de Balasy was among the guests at a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy in honor of the former Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. Henry Frank Heywood. Mrs. Lacy, who is English is a close friend of Mrs. Heywood and met Mr. Lacy while she was visiting her in Washington.

Other guests at the dinner, which was given at their residence, 2556 Massachusetts avenue, were Oscar Chapman, assistant Secretary of Interior; Miss Elizabeth Adams, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Alva B. Adams, of Colorado; Baron Mario Bucovich and Mrs. Robert Pell. Mr. Pell, who is with the State Department, came in afterwards.

The Heywoods leave next week to return to England, where Maj. Heywood will enter business.

Kenneth Horan Leaves for N. Y.

Kenneth Horan (Mrs. Francis P. Horan), novelist, of Evanston, Ill., left for New York last evening after spending several days in Washington as guest of Mrs. Ralph Church. Mrs. Horan, whose "Remember the Day" and "Oh, Promise Me," have been favorably received by critics, recently completed another novel, based on her own experiences, tentatively entitled, "Village Masquerade."

After spending a week in New York, Mrs. Horan expects to return to her home in Evanston. Yesterday, Mrs. Church entertained at a luncheon for Mrs. Horan at the Sulgrave Club. Later the author talked at a meeting at the Congressional Club.

Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, last night initiated a class of 20 new members in honor of the official visit of the national grand regent, Mrs. Bert W. Johnson, of Chicago. The goal of Mrs. Johnson's administration is to double the present membership of 62,000.

The women of the Moose, who originally were organized merely as an auxiliary to the Order of the Moose in the last ten years have been as active as the men in the support of Mooseheart, the city for orphan children, established by the order 25 years ago near Chicago. In the last decade the women have contributed $1,500,000 to the project in addition to sponsoring individual cottages where the children reside, providing homelike surroundings for them, establishing and maintaining a library and sending gifts and greetings to children who are without relatives to remember them on birthdays and holidays.

Mrs. Johnson, in her address to members of Columbia Chapter, emphasized the need for a steady increase in membership in order to continue to carry on the work at Mooseheart and provide for its expansion. Moosehaven for aged members of the order is another undertaking in which the women are equally interested.

She did not rehearse the history of the projects nor the achievement they represent as she only finds that necessary when she talks to strangers, she told the Washington members of the organization. Wherever there is one of the 900 chapters of the society, the women who belong to it are actively interested in some phase of the work and are well informed.

Columbia Chapter Presents Gifts

Last night, Columbia Chapter presented two patchwork quilts to Mrs. Johnson for Dixie Hall—one of the residences for boys which it sponsors. The women have been working for some weeks to complete the quilts in time for the grand regent's visit. One has ship designs and the other Scottie dogs, selected as subjects which would please the boys who received them.

A quilt for every bed at Mooseheart is another goal set by Mrs. Johnson for the Women of the Moose. There are 1,400 beds and many of them already have gay coverlets which the "foster mothers" have provided. The women of the chapters throughout the country "mother" the children of Mooseheart as they would their own, surrounding them with the cheerful little touches which mark the difference between a home and an institution.

"Every day is Christmas there," said Mrs. Johnson, "for not one day passes but gifts come in from somewhere for individuals or for the cottages where the children live."

The Women of the Moose have built up a library of 16,000 volumes and there are also libraries in the different residences. Miss Katherine Smith, grand recorder, who maintains the business offices of the order in Washington, expressed the hope the main library eventually would be the largest and best for children in the world. She accompanied Mrs. Johnson to the meeting last night, as did Mrs. James J. Davis, wife of Senator Davis, director general of the Moose fraternity, who founded the national home and school for orphan children.

Promote High Standards In Own Communities

Not only are the Women of the Moose proud of the high standard of education and community life maintained at Mooseheart, but, through their child welfare, social service and other committees, they endeavor to work toward the same standard in the cities in which they live, Mrs. Johnson pointed out.

Since her election at the annual international convention in Cleveland last September, she has made official visits to the chapters in Wisconsin, Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, New Jersey and Pennsylvania. She came here from Baltimore, where she was honored at a reception Wednesday, and tomorrow goes to Virginia. Next month she will travel through New England. During her stay in Washington she is a guest at the home of Senator and Mrs. Davis.

Local members of the college of regents, by which she was elected last fall, Past Regents Mrs. G. B. Clark, Mrs. Anna Wagner and Mrs. Frances Mitchell acted as a reception committee last night. The senior regent, Mrs. Frances Baldwin, introduced Mrs. H. J. Clark, membership chairman, who presented the class of candidates for membership.

Grace Temple to Talk To Columbian Women

Miss Grace Lincoln Temple will address the Columbian Women of George Washington University at their meeting Tuesday at 4 o'clock at the Columbian House, 2033 G street northwest. Her subject will be "Old Wallpapers."

Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, the president, will conduct the business meeting which follows the tea. Mrs. Charles Riborg Mann will preside at the tea table, assisted by the following hostesses: Mrs. George B. Roth, Mrs. Edward H. Sehrt and Mrs. L. E. Yocum.

News Women's Group Honors Cabinet Wives

Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wife of the Chief Justice of the United States, and several of the Cabinet wives were among guests yesterday afternoon at the tea given by the Newspaper Women's Club in honor of Mrs. Hugo Black and Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, wives of the two newest members of the Supreme Court.

Mrs. Ned Brunson Harris, president of the club, received with the guests of honor. She wore a frock of brown crepe combined with a spring print in tones of orange and brown, and a smart brown straw hat, with flowers matching colors in her dress. Mrs. Black wore a dress of navy blue, with an appliqued border of red down the front of the redingote and around the scarf at her throat. Her broad-brimmed red straw hat matched the trimming on her dress. Mrs. Reed was in black, brightened by a single red rose pinned on one shoulder.

The tea table was decorated with a large bouquet of pink and white snapdragons and white candles in silver candelabra. Among those who poured was Mrs. Homer S. Cummings, wife of the Attorney General, who wore all black.

Club members who assisted were Miss Roberta Bradshaw, the Misses Margaret Germond, Katherine Brooks, Grace and Patricia McGerr, Mrs. Jack W. Joslin and Mrs. Samuel Wassell.

Among guests were Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, wife of the Secretary of Commerce; Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Herron Pearson, wife of Representative Pearson, of Tennessee; Mrs. Wilbur W. Hubbard, Mrs. Atherton MacCondray, Mrs. Carl Lomen, who is here from Alaska for the remainder of the winter; Mrs. Sallie Pickett, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenburg, wife of Senator Vandenburg; Mrs. Warren R. Austin, wife of Senator Austin; Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie, Judge Annabel Matthews, Miss Stella Akin, Mrs. Neitah King, Mrs. Julien Friant, Mrs. Mary McCracken Jones, Mrs. C. E. Bowman, Mrs. Blair Banister, assistant treasurer of the United States; Mrs. Nellie Taeloe Ross, director of the Mint; Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillin, Civil Service Commissioner, and Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock.

Eugenia Pope To Give Dinner

Miss Eugenia Pope, who recently returned from a year's sojourn in Europe, will entertain at dinner tonight at the Mayflower in honor of the first wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Harris.

Among those invited are Mr. and Mrs. Douglas C. Laing, Dr. and Mrs. Virgil J. Dorset, Miss Aileen Harris, William C. Whittle, Julien J. Mason, of Philadelphia, and B. F. Dewees Runk, of Charlottesville, Va.

During her European visit, Miss Pope spent several months in Greece, making a survey of facilities for crippled children. As a result of her work the first crippled children's hospital in Greece is now being started.

Concert Given For Spain Relief

First of Three Programs Is Sponsored by Committee to Aid Children.

Headed by Mrs. Gardner Jackson, the Washington Women's Committee to Aid Children of Spanish Democracy, yesterday sponsored the first of three Friday afternoon chamber music concerts at the Phillips Memorial Art Gallery. The artists were Vilma Kaplan, pianist, Leo Krakow and Marion Wolin, violinists. Mrs. Charles Putnam introduced the trio and explained the purpose of the series of benefits, announcing March 4 and March 11 as the dates of the other two.

The proceeds of these concerts will go direct to the support of Spanish refugee children from 3 to 6 years old who are lodged in the Thomas Jefferson Home, near Valencia, in Spain. The Women's Committee to Aid Children of Spanish Democracy has undertaken to support 25 who are sheltered at this home at the cost of $9 per child per month.

Mrs. Jackson has a letter written by one of these children, addressed to the "dear children of Washington in the U. S. A."

Little Pedro Cito writes:

"The children of Spain chose me to write to you because they say to me I can speak best and tell you what is in our hearts toward you. You send us many things. You send us food, you send us clothes, you send us medicine, soap and toys. Our hearts are full with thanks for all these things you send us that we so badly need because we have war now. Rosita says thank you and Manola says thank you and Louise and Passionada and Mario and all the children of Spain say thank you for what you send us.

"Your friend very much loving
"PEDRO CITO."

The committee in charge of tickets for these concerts includes Mrs. Joseph Mackenzie, Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. A. Ford Hinrichs, Mrs. Ernest Gruening, Mrs. Charles Putnam, Mrs. Clark Warburton, Miss Peggy Duffy, Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel, Mrs. Michael Straus, Mrs. Charles Garland, Mrs. Sidney Falk.

Other Washington residents who will assist in obtaining funds for the relief assistance of the children in the Thomas Jefferson Home are the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy. Early in March a dance will be held, the proceeds of which will go toward the care of these children. One of the notable achievements of this organization, which was formed here over a year ago, was the collection of Christmas stockings for the children which netted some $1,800 in goods and cash.

A series of teas held by individual members of the Washington Friends of Spanish Democracy was the means for collecting money to pay for supplies of powdered milk urgently needed for the refugee population near Madrid.

Many notable Washingtonians are sponsors of the organization, among them Mrs. Louis D. Brandeis, John Carmody, Murray Latimer, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Hogue, Mr. and Mrs. David Saposs, Robert Marshall, Representative Henry Teigan, Louis Block, Mr. and Mrs. Eliot O'Hara, Mr. Francis Gorman, Marquis Childs, Mrs. Harold Ballou, the Rev. Russell Clinchy, Mrs. John Boyles, jr., Robert S. Allen.

Ball Is Planned By Kentuckians

The annual costume ball of the Kentucky Society in Washington to be held in the Willard Hotel ballroom on Monday evening, will take the form of a "world cruise." The guests will wear cruising attire, or any sort of costume that strikes their fancy, and will enter the ballroom by way of a gangplank.

The first "port of call" will be Honolulu where the native Hawaiian dancers will be interpreted by Mrs. C. B. Platt.

Prizes will be awarded for the most beautiful, the most original and the most authentic costumes. Judges will be Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Mrs. W. N. Doak, Gen. E. S. Hartshorn, Miss Flora Macdonald, and Miss Helene Kravatz.

The "ship" will be manned by Fannie Black Ladd as captain, and the chief officer will be Lieut. Col. Russell F. Albert; chief engineer, W. S. Stanley, and purser, John Goodloe. Hostesses will be Mrs. Russell F. Albert, Mrs. W. S. Stanley and Mrs. John Goodloe.

Mrs. Lorenzo Martin is chairman of the committee on decorations.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Thatcher will have as their guests Mr. and Mrs. Horace Chapman Young and Mrs. Harry C. Bond. Mr. and Mrs. Albert Kraemer will have in their box their house guests, Mrs. Leslie V. Brown and Miss Marie Fargo, of Detroit.

Other box holders who will entertain guests for the evening include Mr and Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Mattie Porter, Miss Mae Helm, Miss Fanny Wathen and Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Martin.

Helpers of Blind Hold Card Party

The affair was given for the benefit of a fund being raised by the society for the purchase of a summer camp on the Chesapeake, where Washington's blind can enjoy vacations. For the past two years groups have been taken to rented quarters on the bay, in charge of Miss Louise Moore, secretary of the Friends of the Moment, who herself has been blind since the age of 10. With the assistance of several sighted persons, some of them the children of those in the camp group, happy vacation periods of from two weeks to a month have been provided in the past two years, for many of Washington's blind. One woman last summer told the president of the society it was the happiest time she had ever experienced. For some it was their first trip away from the Capital.

The members of the organization do volunteer work, acting as guides and reading and writing for the sightless. Mme. Blanche Yovin, a French woman residing in New York, founded the society there and three years ago came to Washington to launch the local branch, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt is honorary president.

Members, in addition to rendering individual services to the blind, entertain them in their homes and often the programs are provided by the guests, among whom are several talented musicians. Mrs. William T. Reed, one of the sponsors of the society, is giving vocal instruction to a young blind girl.

Mrs. Reed was among those receiving yesterday, as were Mrs. Floyd Hanley, Mrs. J. L. Bray and Mrs. Fred Gwynn. Mrs. E. J. Boothby was chairman of the party.

Democratic Club Women To Hear Rep. Vinson Talk

Representative Fred M. Vinson, of Kentucky, who is chairman of the House Ways and Means subcommittee on taxation, will discuss taxation at the Monday luncheon of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

Hostesses for the luncheon which will take place at the clubhouse at 1526 New Hampshire avenue are: Mrs. South Trimble, Mrs. C. C. Moiz, Mrs. Ogilvie Shumate and Mrs. Rene Jones Taylor.

Today the club will round out a busy week which included the election of officers, with a luncheon followed by bridge.

Nurses Give Dance.

The Nurses Alumnae Association of Emergency Hospital held its annual winter ball in the Dragon Room of the Wardman Park Hotel last night for the benefit of the hospital. The patroness list was headed by Lady Lindsay, wife of the British Ambassador; Mme. Troyanovsky, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, and Miss Janet Fish, superintendent of nurses of Emergency Hospital. Miss Virginia Boyce acted as chairman of the committee which arranged the dance.

THE BEST-LAID PLANS of Daughters of the American Revolution, like those of mice and men, sometimes fail to materialize. Chickenpox, mumps and measles loomed up on the horizon at Tamassee School, which is sponsored by the D. A. R. down in South Carolina and prevented 8 of 10 students from coming to Washington to participate in the program of the State conference opening Sunday.

For months local chapters had been planning to bring the children to the Capital for the occasion and saving money to that end, then along a mump and a measle and upset all the plans.

BOTH CANDIDATES for the office of State historian of the District D. A. R. have been guests of honor this week at receptions given by their chapters.

Last night, Descendants of '76 Chapter entertained at the home of Mrs. Clyde Hamblin in honor of Mrs. Tonnis J. Holzberg, who at present is chairman of National Defense Through Patriotic Education. On Washington's Birthday, members of the Thomas Marshall Chapter gave a tea at Grayson House, home of Mrs. Marvin M. Vaughn, in honor of Mrs. Henry Wagner, their candidate for State historian.

At both parties present State officers received with regents and guests of honor. Miss Anne B. Coons is regent of Descendants of '76 Chapter and Miss Agnes Randolph, of Thomas Marshall Chapter.

FIVE WORLD FAMOUS WOMEN stepped to the microphone to discuss "The Role of Women in the Modern State" in a broadcast yesterday under auspices of the ness and Professional Women in International Federation of Busicelebration of International Day, which is being simultaneously observed in 25 countries.

Three of the five, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Lady Astor, and Dr. Renee Girod, of Geneva, Switzerland, agreed that women's greatest service to humanity was to foster world peace. A fourth, Signora Olivia Rossetti Agresti, of Italy, niece of Dante Gabriel and Christina Rossetti, said substantially the same remarking that one of the most valued assets the Italian woman brings to the life of her country is her "deep sense of spiritual values."

The broadcast linked five nations, each speaker except Lady Astor broadcasting from the capital of her country, while Lady Astor spoke from Plymouth.

In keeping with the theme of the observance, the inauguration of a world-wide campaign to increase the number of women in public office. The federation presented four women who hold unique positions in the government of their own countries. Mrs. Rosalind Messenger, of Bungay, Suffolk, England, "reeve" of her town; Mme. Laure Albin Guillet, director of Photographic Archives for the French Government; Senator Cairine Wilson, of Ottawa, first woman appointed to the Canadian Senate, and Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, of Washington, director of the United States Mint.

SEVERAL PARTIES were given last night preceding the annual dinner dance of the Trinity Alumnae Association which was held at the Mayflower.

Among those entertaining was Mrs. Marcel Mallet-Prevost, who had as guests, Mr. and Mrs. Dermott Nee, Miss Julia Diggins, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Fahy, Mr. and Mrs. William Delaney and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Meehan.

Mrs. William Lebling gave a cocktail party at her home, having as guests, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Burkinshaw, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Daly, jr., Dr. and Mrs. James J. Hayden and Dr. and Mrs. Joseph McGowan.

Mrs. C. Edwin McNamara also entertained several members of her class.

KAPPA GAMMA SORORITY, which maintains its headquarters at the Raleigh Hotel, is carrying on an active program this winter. Epsilon Chapter this afternoon is having a card party in the clubrooms at the Raleigh from 3 to 5:30 and, Monday night, is sponsoring a subscription dance from 10 to 1. Guests of honor will be national officers, chapter presidents and the educational director, Dr. Jesse W. Sprowls, of Maryland University.

Amelia Earhart Fund Drive Is Planned Here

By the Associated Press.

A campaign to raise $500,000 for the Amelia Earhart Foundation, sponsored by Thiel College at Greenville, Pa., was inaugurated yesterday at the White House.

Mrs. Roosevelt, honorary chairman of the sponsors committee, invited more than 60 women who attended a luncheon at the Executive Mansion to help establish a memorial to the flier lost in the Pacific.

No request for funds was made, but Representative Caroline O'Day, chairman of the meeting, urged those present to make themselves temporary chairmen in their own communities to stimulate interest in the drive.

"I'm here to report for duty," responded Judge Florence Allen, of Columbus, Ohio.

Among others who attended were Fannie Hurst, New York novelist, and Mrs. Ogden Reid, of New York.

Objectives of the foundation, outlined by Dr. Henry H. Bagger, head of the Lutheran Synod, of Pittsburgh, were:

1. Post-graduate scholarships for Women in sociology and science.

2. An Amelia Earhart Memorial Hall, at Thiel College, as a residence for girls and a social center.

3. A memorial lectureship to be given annually.

4. An Amelia Earhart chair of science at Thiel.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

DIPLOMATIC DIDOES: One of the airier of the foreign diplomats in Washington promised two ladies visiting from his homeland that he had a real treat for them; he would take them next morning to see one of the Capital's most prominent personages.

* * * *

Hall Paxton . . . loved it.

Next morning he drove them mysteriously out Connecticut avenue to the Zoo and showed them Wahoo, the big baboon, solitary in his cage.

"That's one of the town's bigshots," he said, and laughed uproariously.

One of the ladies indiscreetly repeated the story; now he is explaining it was just a jest.

* * * *

J. Paxton Hall, American official who was wounded on the Panay (you saw him in the news reels with a black beard, now vanished), is recuperating in Washington . . . He tells friends that he enjoyed the bombing tremendously; felt let down later.

"—bigshot to the diplomat"

One of the smartest of the young Congressmen (Harrington, of Iowa, who played on Notre Dame's great "Four Horsemen" team) is telling his constituents that there are no supermen or mental giants in Congress.

"There are just as true statesmen," he says, "on your town council or school board."

* * * *

CORDELL HULL.

His attitude toward foreign alarms is "Don't look now—that man's making faces at you." . . . The good gray Secretary of State is in public the apogee of decorum and punctiliousness . . . Privately he has one of the best profane vocabularies in the Capital — fully as good as Herbert Hoover's . . . It is almost incredible that this life-size statesman was once national chairman of his party . . . He has half a dozen pet phrases he uses in almost every conversation, and a trick of beginning a sentence as if he were about to define our foreign policy; halfway through, he always changes his mind . . . To him the New Deal appears to seem just a local atmospheric disturbance . . . If he were 15 years younger, none of the young hooligans would be ahead of him for the Presidency in 1940. In the lingo of a Western eulogist, he is universally admired, more than universally beloved.

Sec. Hull.

Earnest, high-minded Beatrice Gould, young co-editor of the Ladies Home Journal, appeared before a Senate committee in eloquent indorsement of the La Follette bill for eradication of venereal disease.

Next day she was horrified to find herself described in a news account as "a striking blonde." She hopes her readers don't hear of this.

"—dunce caps from FDR"

Every morning when he reaches his office Attorney General Cummings inquires of his assistant:

"Well, what's today's daily crisis?"

* * * *

That man looks like a Johnny Bull
His cheeks all rounded, rosy-full,
He might be Pickwick's self.
My son, that happy looking gent
Can bite as well as bark
When Senate rules are torn and rent;
Missouri's Bennett Clark.

—SENATOR X.

After several days' speculation, observers here are still puzzled by the President's lecture on "balance of prices." . . . Candid newsmen think it was a wholesale give-away of dunce caps . . . Cagiest guess to date: That it broke trail for higher prices as a prelude to higher taxes.

Anacostia Citizens Score U.S. Oil Tax

Opposition to the Boland bill placing a national tax of 1 cent per gallon on fuel oil, was voiced last night in a resolution adopted by the Anacostia Citizens Association.

The civic group, meeting in Anacostia Methodist Church, voted to urge appropriation of $785,000 for the Pennsylvania avenue bridge construction, and as favoring a District of Columbia flag.

A resolution was adopted opposing transfer of school employes to control by Commissioners, and favoring increase of relief from the present $900,000 allotted to $1,900,000. The association went on record as favoring the King bill to kill the "numbers racket."

Purposefully drawing their chairs around committee tables, about 25 serious-faced members of Washington's most unusual alumni group carefully mapped out plans yesterday for the fitting celebration of their alma mater's tenth anniversary.

The chairs and tables, however, were about 18 inches high, the celebration will mark the first decade of the National Child Research Center—and the "old grads" were all under 15 years of age, "the youngest alumni association in the world."

Meeting yesterday to discuss the program of games and, of course, refreshments, for the birthday party March 12, boys and girls who were "graduated" from the preschool center five to ten years ago must get down to business. They broke up into four committees, composed as follows: Social, Barbara Eckhart, Jean Saperstein, Polly MacCarteney, Patricia Kavanagh, Marcia Klein and Harriet Ann Glueck, with the assistance of Mrs. Mordecai Ezekiel; invitations, Roscoe Hankin, Barbara Smith, James Hinton and Joyce Moyle, assisted by Mrs. Fanning Hearon and Mrs. Myron Watkins.

reminisced on the good old days when they were young. (The center admits children from 18 months to 6 years old.)

"I remember that a girl slapped my face—and I slapped hers in return," observed Page Schmitt, 12, who was a young man of approximately 2 when the event transpired.

An alumna aged 9 piped up with her recollections "of hunting red berries in the yard," while pretty 12-year-old Patricia Kavanagh's most prominent recollection was being "sent upstairs" for misbehavior. Practically all the old grads remembered "having drops put in my nose."

But these things were far in the past . . . and ladies and gentlemen

Before the business session gave way to ice cream and cookies at yesterday's meeting, the alumni chose Alden K. Evans, 13, of 3639 Warren street northwest, as their president. Interviewed after the election, Alden assured a reporter he was "elated." Now a pupil at Devitt School, he said he had more fun when he went to nursery school—because he has to study algebra now, and (this with emphasis): "I hate algebra!"

Mrs. Anna Roosevelt Boettiger, daughter of President and Mrs. Roosevelt, is chairman of the board of trustees of the center, which is located at 3209 Highland place northwest.

Jobs Earlier In Life Urged By First Lady

Responsibility Stressed at American Youth Congress Session.

Country Boys Get More Chance to Mature, She Declares.

If city youngsters had the same opportunity to accept responsibility as usually is given their country cousins, the youth problem of the Nation might be nearer solution, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt asserted last night at a meeting of the Washington council of the American Youth Congress in the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church.

"Although it is harder for them to get an education and even though the schools they attend may not be as good, there may be something worthwhile in the kind of life they lead and the difficulties they have to overcome," she declared.

Older persons should accept the responsibility, Mrs. Roosevelt said, for "finding avenues in which young people can be useful earlier" than they are today.

Not the Accepted Idea.

"Now, I know that is not supposed to be a good idea. I know the idea is that the young person should stay longer in school—and I also believe that youngsters should get all the schooling possible, not because he may be fitted for a better job primarily but because he who knows the most is able to get the most enjoyment out of life.

"So I am not suggesting that we take the young people out of school, but that we make it possible for them to have part-time employment while they are in school in order that they may have the maturity they need when they look for full-time jobs," she said.

Mrs. Roosevelt said she became convinced of the value of "early usefulness" during her trips to various parts of the country and at the farm conferences held yearly at Cornell University.

"At Cornell I have seen a young farmer who at 17 had known the responsibility of a farm with 17 cows on it. Now, there was no shirking that responsibility," she said. "Cows cannot be neglected.

"More and more I am feeling that probably we are not helping our young people get their start in life early enough."

The idea that part time jobs can be pursued along with studies was likewise stressed by Dr. Homer P. Rainey, director of the American Youth Commission, who preceded Mrs. Roosevelt on the program.

Sees Youth Excluded.

Dr. Rainey, however, saw the part time arrangements as a necessity forced by changing conditions arising from the "tendency to exclude youth under 21 from jobs" rather than as a needed step toward maturity. He pictured it as the bridge between the accepted school age of today and the accepted job age.

Vocational education in the schools has failed to touch the problem, he declared.

"There is no denying that vocational education is the hottest spot in the American education system today. The truth is that 75 per cent of the jobs open to the youth of today require no vocational training and another 20 per cent of them require only from six weeks to six months. A boy can well come out of a vocational school unfitted to hold any position at all. The majority of them do," he said.

When the American leaders of 100 years ago promised a free common school education to all boys and girls who wanted it, they never dreamed—Dr. Rainey declared—that a century later 95 per cent of the youth of the Nation would be desiring to accept the proposition.

Abbott Simon, legislative director for the Congress, closed the meeting with an explanation of plans for the third annual youth pilgrimage to Washington on March 10, 11 and 12. The pilgrimage this year is termed one "for jobs and education," both of which Simon said could be secured through enactment of "legislation already pending in Congress."

Firemen Shoeless; Robber Enters as They Fight Blaze

Two firemen who went away to fight a blaze returned to their firehouse last night to find themselves shoeless.

The firefighters were H. N. Merritt and D. M. Peter, of Truck Co. No. 10. They were called out with their mates to the two-alarm blaze at the Union Fuel Co., at South Capitol and M streets southwest. They donned their boots and left their shoes, as is the custom, in the firehouse.

When they returned the shoes were gone.

Nobody Loves Him Who Carries Cannon Ball, And Carrier Doesn't Love It Either, He Says

Athol W. Mellott and his historic "find."

Athol W. Mellott, of Alexandria, paced Washington streets yesterday with a possibly loaded Civil War cannon ball in his hands and feeling like a man who has a bear by the tail, unable to hang on and afraid to turn it loose.

Disturbed by his burden—which was heavier on the mind than on the hands—Mellott went first to the War Department for relief and was invited, politely but firmly, from the place. From there he went to the Navy Department, to be eased out. At the Metropolitan Police Headquarters he was politely treated, but unwelcome.

"This is a terrible jam," said Mellott, staring at the grim and explosive face of the cannon ball. "If I throw it in the Potomac River I may imperil navigation; if I lay it on the street and walk away I might be arrested for depositing a dangerous bomb; no one will let me bury it on his land." Mellott sighed gravely and readjusted the bomb tenderly under his arm.

Mellott is a mild-mannered man, a locomotive fireman with a good, long record of service. He is not given to introspection, else he would have thought how a man never knows when he gets up in the morning what will befall him before night. Certainly, he wasn't thinking of the Civil War when he strolled yesterday morning to a field near Fort Myer where some laborers were digging. They had uncovered, from a 3-foot depth, the cannon ball and were picking at the explosive hole.

"Don't!" cried Mellott, rushing on them. "That thing's liable to go off." The next thing he knew, he was owner of the cannon ball.

"I just figured I could take it to the War Department; I thought they liked all kinds of things up there," Mellott said later.

They didn't like it. He learned that the Navy Department didn't like it, so he tried the police. The police relieved themselves in this fashion: "Take the bomb straight to the sheriff of Arlington County; that's where it came from."

By this time the cardboard box Mellott was carrying the bomb in was bending at the bottom from the weight, and Mellott sought another box. No one was anxious to co-operate with him. The grim, iron realism of the cannon ball's ugly face, and the disturbed, agitated countenance of Athol W. Mellott went together down E street—Mellott having one of those If-I-should-die-think-only-this-of-me looks and the cannon ball looking mad enough to stop a couple of Rebel yells.

350-Gallon Still Seized in D. C. By U. S. Agents

Baltimorean Arrested in Treasury Raid on Farragut St. House.

Special agents of the Treasury Department last night captured a 350-gallon copper still and 120 gallons of alleged illicit whisky in a sudden raid on a house in the 1300 block Farragut street northwest.

They arrested Guilio Quattrini, 34, of Baltimore, said to be connected with "Guinea Ralph" Marcantoni. Quattrini told police he was an Argentinian. He was held at Sixth Precinct Police Station.

After watching the big house several days when neighbors reported the blinds always drawn and its occupants unfriendly, Francis J. Sweeney and John T. Foster, of the alcohol tax division of the Treasury Department, and three Sixth Precinct policemen made the raid. They saw a man emerge from the house and enter an automobile which they followed to Piney Branch road and Delafield place northwest, where they forced the car to the curb.

The driver attempted to escape but was seized by the agents and police who found five 25-gallon kegs of alleged whisky in the machine. At the station the driver gave his name as Quattrini.

On the second floor of the Farragut street house, the still was found. Three 30-gallon kegs and a 5-gallon can of alleged liquor were found in the basement.

Marcantino was arrested January 7 when he went to Traffic Court to settle a ticket for parking. Previously police had found a still in a raid on a large house at Sixteenth and Madison streets northwest and arrested a man and a youth. All three are under bond awaiting trial.

'Independent' Legal Divisions Urged for Federal Agencies

The necessity for Government lawyers "to tip their hats to lay chiefs" creates unfavorable conditions for building up a Federal legal staff to the highest standards, Horace Russell, president of the Federal Bar Association, asserted last night.

Speaking before 200 members of the association at a conference in the Commerce Department, Russell advocated an "independent position and an independent budget" for the legal departments of Government bodies.

Participating in the panel on administrative law, Dr. Emmett Sebee, attorney for the United States Board of Tax Appeals, declared, "Review of administrative action by the Federal courts has made possible as many varying decisions on the same question as there are district and appellate courts in the country."

He urged creation of a new appellate court to review judicial decisions of Administrative bodies.

Such a court, he asserted, would hand down uniform decisions and soon build up a valuable body of administrative law.

Russell asked, "How many lawyers in the United States even know how to go about getting review of an Administrative decision?"

Procedural uniformity in the exercise of judicial functions by Administrative agencies would eliminate numerous cases which now require review in Federal courts, he said.

Walter M. Bastian, member of the District Bar Association, stated that the individual's rights, under administrative law, "have often been subjugated to executive efficiency and expedition. There should be no difference in procedure between a case involving citizen and citizen and one involving the citizen and his government."

The latter type of case, he said, should not be tried by men "fearful for their tenure of office or subject to any suspicion of coercion."

Robert M. Cooper, anti-trust division lawyer, charged that "the judiciary has gone far toward converting many administrative agencies into mere bodies for hearing testimony," while awarding to itself the "doubtful privilege" of ruling on questions already given mature consideration by experts.

Other speakers included Carl McFarland, Assistant Attorney General; William R. Vallance, of the State Department, and Thomas M. Ross, of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

House Group Veers to D. C. Business Tax

Rep. Wood, Key Man on Committee, Ready to Change Stand.

Representative Wood (Democrat), Missouri, key man on the House Fiscal Affairs sub-committee, yesterday indicated he was veering toward the business privilege tax and away from an income tax for the District.

Wood's vote probably will be as important when the sub-committee meets to act on the District tax bill as it was when the income tax title was written into the measure several weeks ago. At that time he stood with the two minority members, Dirksen, of Illinois, and Cole, of New York.

"Washington business men centered their testimony on faults of the business privilege tax so that there was hardly any consideration given to the income tax," he said.

Information Lacking.

"I still favor the income tax in principle, but it seems to me that we have little information about how it would work here and haven't got time to get any now."

Wood also reiterated the opinion that the House will be hostile to the income tax, regardless of whether or not it exempts members of Congress.

"Many of the members won't vote for it if taxes members," he said, "and others won't vote for it if it excludes them for fear of repercussions back home. After all, this is an election year."

Exemption Move Grows.

Sponsors of the income tax on the sub-committee have indicated a willingness to exempt members although they originally agreed that the tax should apply to all persons earning income in the District.

"I believe Washington businessmen would rather have the privilege tax for another year than an income tax, too," Wood said. "They know that its a nuisance tax and probably just temporary, and they know if an income tax is once enacted into law it will stay."

No meeting of the sub-committee has been called by Chairman Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and it is not expected that any action will be taken before early next week.

Screen Baffler And Bowes Unit Click at Capitol

'Arsene Lupin Returns' With Clever Amateurs Totals Good Bill.

"ARSENE LUPIN RETURNS." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story and screen play by James K. McGuinness, Howard Emmett Rogers and George Harmon Coxe, based on characters created by Maurice Le Blanc, featuring Melvyn Douglas, Virginia Bruce and Warren Williams, with John Halliday, Nat Pendleton, Monty Woolley, E. E. Clive, George Zucco, Vladimir Sokolov, Tully Marshall and Jonathan Hale. Directed by George Fitzmaurice. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

Two celebrities, one fictional, the other actual, but ever unseen by his admirers, return to the Capitol this week.

We refer to that delightful rascal, Arsene Lupin, who capers on the screen, and to Major Bowes who offers another bouquet of budding talent on the stage.

While any due respect for superlatives prevents their application to the Capitol offerings this week, the show in balance, size and variety certainly rates the upper brackets of the comparatives. "Arsene Lupin Returns" offers a romping, ring-around-the-rosy mystery and detective yarn. Major Bowes has a yard-long string of bright-eyed young entertainers, full of ambition and devilment.

Those handsome slickers, Warren William and Melvyn Douglas, have it all their own way with "Arsene Lupin Returns." We won't tell you which one turns out to be the redoubtable Arsene, since both sprout wicked little Gallic moustaches and those subtle Latin mannerisms. But may we warn you, dear prospective audience, against walking in during the middle of the picture. You'll have to see it a time and a half to get the correct hang of the curlicues of the plot. And the ins and outs of this diverting detective yarn are too good to miss.

A Hoodoo Emerald.

The famed "De Grissac emerald," grand-daddy of all emeralds, big as the Hope diamond and twice as trouble making, is the story's pivot. Where the emerald goes, trouble follows. The darned stone is green as Erin, hot as Hades, fatal as a hit-and-run driver.

Suave, sharp, too handsome, the firm of Melvyn Douglas and Warren William is intrinsically responsible for the picture. We had never realized before how much resemblance there was in the boys' styles. But when large and homely Nat Pendleton steps into the picture, both of the polished lads have to watch their step. The steer-like Master Pendleton is something of a picture stealer.

John Halliday (the boy has grown older) is Virginia's uncle and offers some of the best pretending in the picture. May we hope that Mr. Halliday will shortly blossom forth in such fine roles as Lewis Stone is playing? He is the fellow for them. Fine old Tully Marshall is at his always superior best as a jewel fence."

A short by Messrs. Pat Rooney, jr., and Herman Timberg, jr., offers some of the best St. Vitusish dancing and a college dormitory version of the bedroom play. The newsreel features the British stoutening of their Singapore naval defense.

The Professional Amateurs.

Cream of the Maj. Bowes' revue were O'Brien and Goldberg, who may be classified as amateurs, but don't belong there. Their ribbing of radio advertising was sweet balm to radio-banged ears and even better was their "prize-fight broadcast," which should bring blushes to even the brazen faces of prize-fight broadcasters. We give you Messrs. O'Brien and Goldberg, and down the hatch, my hearties!

Dave Barry, two-timing as M. C. and impersonator, rated better on the second than the first, due mostly, we hasten to say, to some ultra-bromidic M. C. introductions and gags for which he probably was not responsible.

Jack Powell, winner of a Thursday Maj. Bowes contest, makes a sudden stage debut in the show. He's a tremendously promising kid, both in personality and singing.

Best of the balance of the Bowes boiling was Pearl Robins, who tap dances on the tips of her toes with great skill. Frances Burke gained audience approval with her impersonations, although this critic still thinks that little Frances can do more impersonations on one expression—but let's skip it. Jackie Fields gets good rhythm out of teaspoons and ditto for the Six Philharmoniacs with harmonicas. Ralph Lawrence sings soprano, tenor and barytone—and wears one earring. Louise Boyd tap dances prettily, the Texas Wranglers (from New Jersey) wrangle Western songs with enthusiasm. That ingratiating rascal, Tony Russo, plays tunes on a fire extinguisher, an ancient inner tube and a rubber glove (obviously with the aid of a concealed reed, but it's still a good stunt). It's a big and Bowes'sy show.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

W. C. Fields Heads a Star Cast in Tuneful Film of Gay Nonsense.

"THE BIG BROADCAST OF 1938." Paramount picturization of a story by Howard Lindsay and Russel Crouse, adapted to the screen by Walter de Leon, Francis Martin and Ken England, starring W. C. Fields, with Martha Raye, Dorothy Lamour, Shirley Ross, Lynne Overman, Bob Hope, Ben Blue, Leif Erikson, Grace Bradley, Rute Davis, Patricia Wilder, Lionel Pape, Dorothy Howe and Russell Hicks, with interpolated specialties by Kirsten Flagstad, of the Metropolitan Opera Company; Tito Guizar, Wilfred Pelletier, conductor; Shep Fields and his "Rippling Rhythm Orchestra." Reviewed Friday afternoon. At the Earle Theater.

This elaborated musical, latest in the annual series under the same title, is principally notable, of course, for reintroducing William C. Fields to a stellar spot on the screen after a long absence induced by serious illness and a like period of recuperation. Mr. Fields is completely and devastatingly himself again—unctuous, bombastic and over-stuffed with all of those quaint comedy conceits that have made him one of the outstanding figures in American amusement since he emerged from the role of silent juggler in vaudeville to assume stardom in the "Follies" and other gargantuan and gay musical fol-de-rols.

BELL.

There are some traces of "old stuff" in the intervals of humor contributed to this film by the comedian with the incandescent nose. There are also some new twists to familiar comic devices that deserve to be dwelt upon briefly. The redoubtable Mr. Fields, to begin with, has contrived some new variations of his old pool game. The things he accomplishes with a rainbow cue are something to see. One shot and he sits placidly by and awaits the fall of the ivories into the various pockets that punctuate the sides of the table. By dint of a little cheating and a few miracles of cuemanship, the numbered spheres drop with amazing precision into the webbed receptacles that seem as surprised as Mr. Fields' opponent. Then there is the matter of his steering the good S. S. Gigantic through a maze of icebergs in its race to Europe with the S. S. Colossal. It is too simple a business for the hands, so T. Frothingill Bellows steers the ship with his feet—and makes it. Makes it by an eyelash, more often than not, but still makes it! Quite a comedian, this Mr. Fields.

Many Share Spotlight.

Quite a comedian or not, "Bill" Fields still is not the whole show. Martha Raye, Bob Hope, Shirley Ross, Lynne Overman, Dorothy Lamour, Ben Blue, Leif Erikson and all the others named in the small-type paragraph at the top of this column come in for a flash or two of the spotlight before the thing is over. Miss Raye gets the roughest treatment. She is tossed all over the place, shot down refuse chutes, thrown through ship's ventilators and otherwise manhandled, all in the name of good clean fun. Her major song number is that "Oh, Mama, That Moon Is Here Again" business that should cave her in completely, but, contrary to every expectation, seems to leave her still among the living.

Bob Hope and Shirley Ross also enter an important starter in the melody sweepstakes in "Thanks for the Memories," a song that attained popularity on the air before it reached a local screen and, as delivered by Mr. Hope and Miss Ross, takes on added stature as a provocative combination of tunefulness and ultra-sophisticated lyrics. Ben Blue is largely wasted and Lynne Overman hasn't too much to do, either, except be the victim of Miss Raye's enthusiastic romanticism. Dorothy Lamour is decorative and sings her song exceedingly well.

Kirsten Flagstad, of the Metropolitan Opera, is briefly introduced to render an aria from "Die Valkyrie" in gorgeous voice and Shep Fields' orchestra does a number early in the action that exemplifies to some degree how "rippling rhythm" had better be played. Tito Guizar is another extraneous character who is introduced momentarily for the benefit of his peculiarly effective voice and guitar.

It seems hardly necessary to remark that there is no sense whatever to the story of "The Big Broadcast of 1938," or that it is intended to serve any other purpose than one of fleeting diversion not to be remembered five minutes after you have left the theater.

Billy Gilbert a Hit.

The stage bill at the Earle this week is distinguished by the presence in the headline niche of Billy Gilbert, the "sneezing comic of Hollywood," who, with his bride for a foil, assumes the role of chef in a beanery and has fun with the intricacies of the English language. Mr. Gilbert has brought a real act to town and scored heavily at yesterday afternoon's second performance.

Others on the bill include the Sinclair Sisters, agile dancers, and clever enunciators of other acts; Bryant, Rains and Young, dancers who appear twice in sharply contrasted ballroom and adagio routines; Paul Gordon, who does astounding things on all sorts of bicycles, and Carole Manners, a dramatic soprano, whose voice won what might almost be described as an ovation. Miss Manners' only slip was that she was supposed to introduce Billy Gilbert and couldn't remember his name!

Jo Lombardi and the Earle Orchestra occupy the stage this week and offer an overture that introduces several solo artists in the ensemble, led by Sig Ziebel, first violin. A Newman Travelogue, "Malayan Jungles," a color cartoon and the Paramount News are additional auxiliaries of a feature that wouldn't quite knock you out of your pew were it not for the fact that W. C. Fields is in there swinging.

Romantic Figures in Funny Film

DOROTHY LAMOUR AND LEIF ERIKSON as they appear in support of W. C. Fields and Martha Raye in Paramount's production of "The Big Broadcast of 1938," which opened yesterday for a week's engagement on the screen at the Warner Brothers' Earle Theater. Shirley Ross and Bob Hope add to the romanticism of the daffy story in both song and speech. The gelatin is absurd, but amusing.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., Feb. 25—When I wrote my story: "So You Want to Be a Motion Picture Star?" I rattled off facts, not fancy.

Some of my readers may think that's a pretty strenuous life. I thought so, too, until I started this column, which, believe me, is the most exciting thing I've ever tackled. It'll be fun, too, when I get the swing of it. The wholehearted response of my friends and new fans gives me a terrific glow. This is to thank all of you for your letters, telegrams and telephone calls. I'm hoping to find time soon to answer them.

HEDDA HOPPER.

I am especially grateful for the telegram sent by W. C. Fields, who made the following suggestion: "Devote one column a week under the caption, 'Corrections.' Make it a sort of artists' forum where artists may write and correct some of the untruths or malicious gossip au current. It may serve to enlist a host of news contributors and prove you are trying to give the public the unvarnished, without trimmings or decorations. It will be a departure that may be welcomed by the dear public. Be that as it may. I'm interested in you and your new job for The Washington Post. Good luck."

Thanks, Bill. For a long time I've wondered why somebody didn't do that. It seems to be our national indoor sport, building up an idol only to tear it down.

When I read all that bilge from the East about Bob Taylor, I was so mad I could have chewed nails and spit tacks in a lot of faces. But stupidly enough, I didn't realize, until I saw Bob on the set of "Three Comrades" exactly why it was done. Jealousy, pure and simple, that is, if jealousy is either pure or simple.

There was Bob in a pair of coveralls which looked as though termites had nested in them, a gritty cap on his head, dirt smeared all over his face and still the best looking thing I've ever laid my peepers on. Sincere and natural, without swank or sophistication.

He never wanted to go to England. Knew he wasn't ready for that jaunt. Told me so a month before he went. Just a scared boy going into a strange world, and every word he uttered was held against him. I'm delighted that "A Yank At Oxford" is going over with a bang.

I chatted, for the first time, with Franchot Tone. A fine, intelligent actor. His crooked smile always annoyed me and suddenly I knew it was to cover up an inferiority complex. I'd like to see him do young Adolphe Menjou parts.

When I congratulated Guy Kibbee on his performance in "Of Human Hearts," he said: "Thanks, Hedda, but wasn't Charles Coburn wonderful as the doctor? And that kid, Gene Reynolds! You know, Coburn has been offered a contract by every studio in town but won't sign; he'll let nothing interfere with his annual festival of good plays which he puts on every summer in Schenectady. He paid me the honor of wanting me to come on and play David Harum. And, if the fish aren't biting, and the studio will let me, I'll make a stab at it."

Incidentally, "Of Human Hearts" is as real as a bit of homespun, and I always say a good cry will do as much for you as a beauty treatment. Well, here's your opportunity.

But in spite of Jimmy Stewart's brilliant performance, I liked the character of the young boy better before he grew to manhood. Although the writing of that character seemed a little inconsistent to me. That young boy, played by Gene Reynolds, couldn't have forgotten his mother for two years.

And speaking of writing, a pal phoned me and said: "Did you know you had a grammatical error in yesterday's column?" But as my husband, De Wolf Hopper, used to tell me: "If it's grammatical, it can't be an error."

Tarzan Loses Lethal Wallop In Met Picture

'Tarzan's Revenge' Lacks Vital Spark Essential to Jungle 'Fans.'

"TARZAN'S REVENGE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Edgar Rice Burroughs, adapted to the screen by Robert Lee Johnson and Jay Vann, co-featuring Glen Morris and Eleanor Holm, with George Barbier, C. Henry Gordon, Hedda Hopper, George Meeker, Corbet Morris, Joseph Sawyer and John Lester Johnson. Directed by D. Ross Lederman. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Sally Stroud. At the Metropolitan.

To see our candidates for the laurels at present worn by the Ritz Brothers, we advise you to trek down to the Metrpopolitan and witness a snappy little concoction featuring the Three Stooges and called "Wee, Wee, Monsieur." It is our undoubtedly biased opinion that these three are much more subtle in their rough-housing than those three, and that the sound effects accompanying their antics are most effective.

This time they are in Paris, having a high old time, being very artfully arty. The landlord chucks them forth, and so they join the French Foreign Legion and rescue a captain and get involved in some veils in a harem. It is all pleasantly twisted, in the usual Stooge manner, with grunts, whacks, thumps, bumps and idiotic maneuverings sufficient for the most critical follower of the slapstick vogue.

The feature picture is billed as "Tarzan's Revenge," and we intend no discredit to decathlon champ Glenn Morris, nor to backstroker Eleanor Holm, by shoving them into the secondary spot. It happens, however, that Morris is not Weissmuller, and that Miss Holm has a lifted eyebrow which always tangles up the dialogue. And the dialogue is unintentionally absurd.

The Monkey Stars.

Even in second spot, Tarzan and his mate yield honors to Cheeta, the monkey, who runs the gamut of emotions with more facility than they, and this without assistance from a diction teacher, as they obviously did have.

No new plot twists have been added to the Tarzan idyll. A bunch of hunters invade the jungle; Tarzan and his pal, the irrepressible monk, cart the girl with the party off thru the trees; she foreswears civilization for a life of tree-swinging and swimming with the aaah-ooching man of the brambles.

George Barbier and Hedda Hooper stumble apologetically thru their roles, which are trite. Miss Holm and Mr. Morris are fine in the air, or in the water, but pretty bad when they face the cameras full-face.

Which is unfair to the Boy Scouts and the other kids, to whom Tarzan is a minor diety. For them, it will be no disappointment, but rather, a nice-sized picnic. Some of the oldsters might like it, too, but it is distinctly not for those who prefer a touch of stream-lining in their dramas, and a tincture of plot and acting.

Morris has a chance to hurl a home-made javelin, to climb, run, swim and display his prowess in athletic events which caused him to be the United States' decathlon contender in the recent Olympics. He is a nice, rugged young chap, who seems much happier in the treetops than down on the ground, bogged up in the hopelessly meandering chit-chat.

Miss Hopper Sneezes.

Hedda Hopper, Post movie columnist, is almost always a reliable performer. This time she is a hay-fever victim, and we suspect she finds it often more expedient to retire behind a sneeze-screen than to bother with her lines.

Eleanor Holm would be more effective simply strolling about in shorts, in which she is delectable. Her in-the-water shots with Tarzan are her most effective.

If we are prejudiced, forgive us. As an old Tarzan fan who still treasures a thumbed copy of Burroughs' first book, we think we qualify to turn thumbs down on this carbon copy of all the other Tarzan films, which has none of the exciting adventure of the old ones.

We hope Miss Holm and Mr. Morris have better luck in their next film. And we hope Johnny Weissmuller comes back.

Floyd Gibbons has a short, an orchestra flits through several recent hits, and Gabrielle Heater has some good news clips in the newsreel, notably a symposium of what people in this country think about current problems here and in Europe.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

Miami Beach, Feb. 25.

THE DEMOCRAT now occupying New Jersey's most important Federal job will resign his post shortly. He's in Miami Beach now conferring with the party leaders . . . Benny Fields, who opened at the Hangar Tuesday night, demanded and received full payment in advance. Before he stepped onto the night-club floor, a certified check was deposited with his agents in New York . . . Now that the season is almost over, the ban on gambling in Miami Beach will be removed this week. The cafe proprietors are readying the dice tables and roulette wheels . . . Frances Farmer, who has found her stage appearance successful, has asked for a release from her film contract with Paramount. The release is expected next week.

• • • •

BERT FROHMAN, the singer, who has been a major night-club entertainer for many years, is entering a new field. He's opening a publicity office in Hollywood . . . Cross & Dunn were ordered by the Hollywood Yacht Club management not to heed the applause and to refrain from singing any encores—because it keeps the customers away from the gambling room . . . Endor & Farrell, who performed at the Rainbow Room and other swank spots, won't return to N. Y. They will limit their engagements to London cafes and to the night club they own in Fort Lauderdale.

• • • •

• • • •

HARRY HOPKINS, the WPA administrator, marched into the crowded gambling room of the Royal Palms and was stopped by Proprietor Mert Wertheimer. "I want to promote you for a new project," Mert proposed. "The project is for people who want to get off relief." . . . "What is it?" Hopkins asked . . . "Well," was the reply, "I want to enlarge this gambling casino." . . . Hopkins now carries with him a note he's just received from his son, denying the published reports of his separation from Cherry Preiser, the Follies dancer . . . Florence Desmond will appear in the new "Ziegfeld Follies." . . . Vic Orsatti, Sonja Henie's agent, will admit that the report of her proposed flight to Norway with Dick Merrill is a publicity gag.

• • • •

RICHARD CROOKS, the Metropolitan tenor, scheduled to sing before 1,800 customers of the Miami Civic Music Association on Monday, waited at the piano for ten minutes before the ticket-holders finally arrived. Crooks berated the audience for tardiness and then sang . . . Bernarr Macfadden entertains his guests at the Deauville Casino every morning, by turning cart-wheels on the sand . . . Billy Seymour and his wife, Mary Kirk Brown—whose divorce decree becomes final next month—were in 3 night clubs together yesterday. "We're still very good friends," Seymour protested. "Watch." He then called to her: "Hey, Stinky!"

• • • •

ELIA KAZAN, who directed "Casey Jones" for the Group Theater, arrived for a three-day stay. Next week he'll resume his gangster role in "Golden Boy" and is under instruction to acquire a tan quickly—because the role calls for a swarthy appearance . . . Ted Husing, appearing at the night of stars here, brought Betty Lawford from the wings and introduced her: "And now I would like to present to you the young lady I'm escorting about town these days." . . . Miss Lawford, incidentally, is wearing a new wedding ring . . . but not on her left hand.

• • • •

ROBERT TAFT, son of William Howard Taft, left here yesterday without attaining a tan. The best he could do was a crimson sunburn. "Now if I only could get your face to turn green with envy," Mrs. Taft told him. "I'd be married to a swell set of traffic lights." . . . "Here's to Crime," the title of Courtney Ryley Cooper's new book, is the toast always proposed by J. Edgar Hoover—whose new, exciting book, "Persons in Hiding," was published last week . . . Henry Miller, husband of Alice Duer Miller, has a fireplace, bookcases and sofa in his bathroom.

• • • •

THE BETTING COMBINE will venture into the suburbs for their new enterprises in Florida. Their first establishment will open at Sunny Isles next week . . . While Mrs. Bobby Merritt—who was Baby Ryan before she married the jockey—was in the hospital last week giving birth to a second daughter, their first child swallowed a safety pin. Dr. Jackson rushed his bronchoscope from Philadelphia and operated successfully . . . Denis Scanlon confided yesterday that he has completed arrangements to rent the Yankee Stadium from December to March and convert it into an ice palace. It will feature a rink, toboggan slides and ski runs.

Palace

We first caught a quick glimpse of Robert Taylor in a bit in "Handy Andy" and liked him. We liked him better in "Society Doctor" and "Times Square Lady," little program pictures in which he was easy and comfortable and natural and attractive.

And then the panic began.

The public, not Mr. Taylor, lost its head, so it seems to us pretty bloody unfair (the Oxford influence) to blame him for his skyrocketing or to jeer at his attainments and appearance.

"A Yank at Oxford" should help Taylor. Oh, not because of its "hair-on-the-chest athletics," but because it is a good picture in its own right, amusing, straightforward, extremely interesting in its revelation of Oxford traditions and customs, and is well cast and played. Again Taylor is easy, natural, and attractive in the nicely handled title role.

Equally attractive and effective is Griffith Jones, in a taut, clearly drawn portrait of Paul Beaumont. The Wavertree of Robert Coote is a positive delight, and so are the Dean, Scatter and the absent-minded Snodgrass.

Columbia

It is not difficult to trace the superiority of Cecil B. DeMille's silver anniversary production of "The Buccaneer" to its source. It rests primarily in the execellent performances contributed to the leading roles in the film by Fredric March, as Jean La Fitte, the gentlemanly pirate of the title; Akim Tamiroff, as Dominique You, former cannoneer with the armies of Napoleon, and Franciska Gaal, cast as the little Dutch girl who adds romantic flavor to the exciting adventures that are recorded in the story of "Andy" Jackson's victory at the Battle of New Orleans.

There are many others, as goes without saying, who play an important part in rounding out one of the most impressive film plays DeMille ever has brought to the screen. There are pageantry, melodrama and heroics to be found here, all set off by some of the most artistic photography that the screen has seen in years.

The action of the play is initiated by the burning of the White House in the War of 1812, when Dolly Madison saves the Declaration of Independence by an inspired burst of strategy, and then progresses to the South, where La Fitte joins forces with Jackson to save the day for the United States and its dream of national unity.

These flamboyant events are marked by stirring climaxes, droll comedy and a stern adherence to fact—mixed with a little salutary fiction. Fredric March never has done a better piece of work than he brings to the silver sheet in the dashing role of a gentleman brigand, not immune to the charm of beautiful young womanhood, and Akim Tamiroff runs him an exceedingly close second in the role of the rowdy artilleryman who finds fun in the booming of his cannon. Franciska Gaal is extremely good, without being better than many native actresses might have been in the same part.

Trans-Lux

Forty-two timely flashes of headline events are in the news section at the Trans-Lux Theater this week. Among the high lights are Senators Nye, Ellender and Adams, Congressman Maverick and former Ambassador Dodds, discussing the European crisis; British tests of land and sea power, newly appointed Ambassadors Kennedy and Biddle embarking for their assignments, the christening of the new French superliner, Pasteur; storm havoc in Brazil, Ohio and Louisiana; Paul V. McNutt being boomed for 1940 Presidency, several aviation shots and a number of novel celebrations. Lew Lehr appears in two, and the Bureau of Standards is featured testing the relative liveliness of American and National League baseballs.

There are two travelogs, "El Salvador," in color, and "Life in Lapland"—both are interesting and educational. There is the second episode of the Iggie and Chimpanzees series and this is as cute and delightful a short as one could wish. The cartoon is very funny. It is "Lonsome Ghosts," a Disney, and Donald Duck scores heavily.

RKO-Keith's

That miracle of animated fantasy in Technicolor, Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs," yesterday entered its third capacity week at RKO-Keith's Theater, with no diminution of popular interest in its whimsy, humor and reasonably strict adherence to the movement of the classic Grimm fairy tale from which it was adapted.

So much has been said of "Snow White" in this and other columns, both local and national, and so many thousands of people already have viewed it on the Fifteenth street screen, that there remains little that can be said in its praise beyond a reiteration that in this first of his feature-length releases Disney has struck a new and utterly fascinating note in screen entertainment.

He has combined in a single film all of the opulent conceptions of humorous portrayal that have characterized his earlier subjects. Animals, birds, reptiles and the amazingly provocative little men of the title have been merged into an imaginative creation that possesses dramatic fiber, a wealth of comedy and fabulous beauty.

"Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" is an experience in the theater—an adventure that must appeal with equal forcefulness to every age from babyhood to maturity. The voices of the leading figures in the play have been "dubbed in" with uncanny skill. They are contributed by some of the foremost artists of stage and screen. They add immeasurably to the realism of a film that is in no sense real, beyond its power to turn back the years, rebuff gloom and restore one's faith in the gossamer imagery of youth.

*X WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 26, 1938 15

This Morning

Coast Patrons 'Sold' on Seabiscuit.

By Walter Haight.

Pompoon is likely to supplant Seabiscuit as the favorite for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap everywhere except at the track . . . the Santa Anita patrons are rabid Seabiscuit backers and it is doubtful if enough of them will swing away from the gallant son of Hard Tack to make Pompoon the choice . . . regardless of the pay-off odds, Jerry Louchheim, the Philadelphia contractor who owns Pompoon, stands to gather in a mountain of cash if the son of Pompey wins . . . Louchheim is reported to have wagered $500 across the board at odds of 20, 8 and 4 in the future book . . . I understand that Sonny Workman or Harry Richards will ride Seabiscuit in the big race . . . either one would be an improvement over "Red" Pollard, some horsemen contend, despite the fact that Pollard, now on the injured list, rode "Biscuit" in all of his triumphs last year . . . Hialeah Park had to dig down and pay off more than it took in for the "show pool" in that recent War Admiral race . . . $2.20 is the shortest mutuel price allowed in Florida and in the case of War Admiral's show betting, the track had to make up the difference . . . the situation will be as bad, if not worse, when War Admiral goes in the Widener next week . . . Mrs. Ethel V. Mars has promised to have her colors represented in the $12,000 New Orleans Derby but she has not announced that Tiger will represent the stable.

Five years ago, Preston Burch, the Washington trainer, employed three jockeys . . . they were Buddy Hanford, Duke Bellizzi and Jimmy Sullivan . . . each died as the result of injuries incurred in races after they left Burch . . . Hanford succumbed in Maryland, Bellizzi in New York and Sullivan in California . . . Regarding the Sullivan tragedy, Gene Normile, former manager of Jack Dempsey and now controlling the Agua Caliente track, there Sullivan was injured, paid almost all expenses, including hospital and doctors' bills and shipment of the body to Washington as well as the railroad fares of Sullivan's wife and father . . . it was purely a personal gesture on his part . . . $50,000,000 was wagered in France last year . . . Tropical Park opens a week from Monday . . . Hot Springs gets under way the same day . . . there will be racing Monday at Santa Anita, where the bangtails usually get the Wash Day off . . . the program is for charity . . .

• • • •

Few realize the big money there is in breeding . . . for instance, St. Simon, an English stallion, earned more than a million dollars in stud fees . . . he was one of the surest foal-getters on record . . . from 1896 to 1907 he serviced 775 mares and got 554 foals, an average of 25 a season . . . An oddity of racing occurred last year . . . the mare Zembia, popular in Maryland, failed to win in the spring, and it was decided to breed her . . . she failed to become in foal and returned to the races to be a consistent winner . . . Boxing writers had a swell time punning with Nathan Mann's last name in stories on the Joe Louis fight . . . The racing writers will have a good chance if Sceneshifter, He Did or Today wins the $100,000 race.

• • • •

Speaking of Nathan Mann, one of his hometown backers, writes in to ask if we will save pictures of Mann . . . the author of the letter says he is collecting data on the fighter . . . what the heavyweight class needs is more MAN and less data.

• • • •

One of the West Coast gamblers is said to have won $50,000 at blackjack . . . I wonder if the word "with" doesn't belong in place of "at" . . . Merrick, a gelding owned by J. C. Milam, celebrated his thirty-fifth birthday last New Year's Day . . . Bing Crosby will assist Joe Hernandez, the regular announcer, in broadcasting the Santa Anita Handicap . . . In 1922, the Chicago Cubs defeated the Phillies, 26-23 in the National League . . . sort of "ring around the bagsey . . . In case you're with me after that one, Leon Ames, pitching for the Giants in 1905, set a record with 30 wild pitches for the season . . . went a trifle beserk . . .

• • • •

In 1877, 15 players constituted a foot ball team . . . there were nine men on the line, one quarterback, two half backs, one three-quarterback and two fullbacks . . . I'll bet that three-quarterback was a honey of a job . . . but they were 99 44-100 real men in those days . . . The origin of bowling is something of a mystery . . . some historians say Greece and others Egypt . . . and "nertz," says I, rubbing a blistered finger . . . The Enterprise, successful defender of America's Cup in 1930, cost $700,000 to build and equip . . . it brought $5,000 when sold for junk five years later . . . The Japanese started wrestling in 30 B. C. . . . If you don't believe it, prove I'm wrong.

William Arnold, 20, Terp Wrestler, Is Injured in Match

William Arnold, 20, wrestler for the University of Maryland, suffered a tinear fracture of the neck in a match Thursday night at College Park with Edward Clautice, of Johns Hopkins University, according to The Associated Press.

Arnold, who lives at 1317 Gorsuch avenue, Baltimore, was taken to University Hospital in that city yesterday for treatment. Physicians there said his condition is satisfactory.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Tony Ciaccio arrived here yesterday to complete training for Monday night's bout with George Abrams, got his signals crossed and almost wound up in a free-for all with Abrams' manager, Syd Fishel.

Hot words and enthusiastic gestures were exchanged with Fishel inviting Ciaccio down out of the ding, and Tony preparing to accept when the sizeable girth of Matchmaker Ahearn edged into the picture.

Trouble started in the dressing room where Fishel introduced himself to the itinerant Italian, and identified himself as Abrams' manager. A blow-torch applied to a stack of dynamite couldn't have produced more excitement.

"Wotinell you doing here," Ciaccio demanded, glaring belligerently at Fishel. "Ya gotta get outta here before I'll work. I ain't gonna work with you around here. Whaddya take me for, a chump?"

"It's a public workout, isn't it," Fishel retaliated. "What are you going to do, chase all them people out and work secretly?"

"They can stay, but you're that other guy's manager, and I'm not working in front of you."

Ahearn hushed up the pair long enough to seize Fishel by his coattails and gave him a gentleman's bums' rush through the exit.

"You want I should have my show busted up by an argyment?" he asked. "Save that stuff for Monday, and let George do the fiding."

Ciaccio spent 15 minutes shadow boxing, warming up for two rounds of actual fisticuffing with Alex Franklin, colored lightweight, and also waiting for a member of the District Boxing Commission to appear. That body ordered him here for public workouts, to examine him fully and to let the public see for itself the type of fighter selected for Abrams.

He was just pulling on the gloves when Ciaccio spotted Fishel again,

Greenleaf Off In Exhibition

Pocket Billiards Wizard Defeats 2 Opponents.

Ralph Greenleaf, world's pocket billiards champion, was not in form last night in an exhibition match at the Earle Parlors, and a little downhearted at his inability to keep the balls rolling pocketward.

He disposed of Garrett Quinn in the matinee performance, 125-7, running out his complete string after Quinn led off with his abbreviated run. There is no telling where he could have gone from there, but the sleek haired maestro wanted to save his best for the evening.

Vernon (Binks) Taylor, his opponent, gave the titleholder a fairly good match, bowing by a count of 125-43, but was never a serious threat. He rattled off a run of 36 and never got going thereafter. Neither could Greenleaf hit his stride and put together his winning total in clusters of 5 to 45.

He ended the match with a run of 12, and continued play on a miss-and-out basis. Whereas he had been scratching on break shots, missing usually dead-in shots by unfortunate breaks and hairline margins, he cleaned up everything in sight in the overtime exhibition. He was cueing for his forty-sixth ball, apparently an easy one, when the shrill blast of a police scout caused him to miscue, ending the match. Greenleaf threw down his stick in disgust.

He was opologetic for the performance, but atoned for it with a brief, but brilliant, exhibition of trick shots.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 25.—Clark Griffith, who has been signing ball players, man and boy for 50 years, completed a fine piece of business tonight when he maneuvered Al Simmons' name onto a 1938 Washington contract.

The stroke of Simmons' pen swept away a huge chunck of Griffith's contract troubles. The veteran outfielder who was handed a salary cut by the Nats' owner following his poor season at bat in 1937 when he hit only .280 loomed as Griffith's No. 1 holdout.

But a half hour after they repaired to Griffith's hotel room, the pair emerged with the announcement that "terms were satisfactory." There was "no trouble" said Griffith. Simmons was beaming.

Thus it is apparently that they arrived at a compromise between the $15,000 Simmons drew last season and the $10,000 Griffith offered him. The outfielder will be a $12,000 performer next season, it is understood.

Simmons whose job is mildly threatened by the presence of rookie George Washington Case, with the Nats is eager to fit himself for the campaign and will go into training immediately, two weeks before he was originally ordered to report.

His 1938 salary is a distinct step down for Simmons who for years was among the highest paid players in the league. When he was sold by Connie Mack to the White Sox five years ago, Simmons three-year contract at $30,000 per annum still had two years to run.

Simmons capitulation leaves only Pitchers Wes Ferrell and Monte Weaver and Outfielder Johnny Stone unsigned. Griffith anticipates no difficulty in obtaining their signatures to 1938 articles.

Owls Down Georgetown

Win League Finale by a Score of 51-34.

Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 25.—Before a rather small crowd of 2,500 at Convention Hall tonight, Georgetown went down to defeat, 51 to 34, before the Temple Owls, champions of the Eastern Intercollegiate Conference.

Tonight's victory brought to a close the season's conference schedule for the Templars, and gave them a record of nine victories and one loss in Eastern Collegiate Conference play, and 19 wins out of 21 starts.

Out after the individual scoring record, Don Shields, Owl forward, missed that mark for a single game, but put on a brilliant exhibition, nevertheless, totaling nine fielders and one foul goal for a total of 19 points, five points shy of a new loop figure.

Temple seemed sluggish at the start of the fray, and, with Harry Bassin and Joe Murphy leading the attack, the Hoyas kept right on the Templars' heels for a few minutes. The Owls soon found themselves, however, and were ahead at the half-time mark, 20 to 10.

After the second half got under way, there was not much doubt as to the ultimate outcome, for Temple, sparked by Shields, continued to pile points through the hoop, despite frequent substitutions.

Joe Murphy, with nine points, was high scorer for Georgetown, while Bassin and Kurtyka with seven each tied for runner-up honors on the Hoyas' side.

Six Members' Triumph in First Round

By Bob Garrison.

On full gallop, six riders of The Citadel's Light Brigade boxing team charged through the preliminary rounds of the twelfth annual Southern Conference Tournament at College Park last night to take a commanding lead in the semi-final round scheduled for this afternoon.

Trailed by Maryland, South Carolina, and Clemson, each of which sent five battlers into the roued of four, the Charleston, South Carolina swing team advanced through one knockout, four decisions and one bye. And one representative, Johnny Hughes, 115-pounder, assured the Bulldogs of at least three points when he drew another bye in the semi-finals.

A crowd of 1,000 saw Maryland, defending team champion, without the services of a single defending individual title-holder, fare poorly however, in actual competition. Three of it's mittmen who saw actual dutp were defeated while a fourth fought his way into the semi-finals.

Benny Alperstein Wins.

Only Benny Alperstein, southpaw 125-pounder, who won the National Inter-collegiate 135-pound championship last year and who has fought as a 145-pounder this season, was victorious. He waltzed and jabbed his way through an easy three rounds to post the Terps' lone victory of the night. The Baltimore Junior defeated John "Ripper" Murray, clever Clemson clubber, by decision as his three teammates were eliminated.

The South Carolina Gamecocks moved their quintet into the semi-finals via one knockout, two decisions, one bye, and a forfeit.

Four byes and a decision seat the Clemson five into the select round as only Teddy Boselli, 115-pounder, climbed through actual combat. He decisioned Bobby Brown, in the second bout of the three hour card.

Although still in the background, running with the field after having advanced but three men, the Duke Blue Devils appeared a potential threat to win or take runner-up honors on the caliber of their survivors.

Farrar Again Victor.

Danny Farrar, top-seeded 145-pounder, moved past Bobby Jones, of Clemson, for the third time in as many years and appeared certain of winning in his division, while Bobby Price, who advanced at the expense of Maryland's George "Red" Dorr, looked good for another five points in the 115-pound group. The third climber, Charlie Kasik, is pitted against No. 2 seeded Nathan Askin, of Maryland, in the semi-final and is an even money choice to pass him and reach the pay-off round.

Most sensational upset, of which there were but two on the entire card of 18 bouts, was the one-round knockout of Orville "Swede" Vincent, top-seeded 175-pounder from Duke. He was battered to the canvas by Jim Polattie, South Carolina entry, and counted out after 1 minute and 40 seconds of action. It was the first victory of the year for the Gamecock light-heavyweight.

John "Moe" Egan, seeded No. 2, in the 175-pound class, was the other victim of upset when he was eliminated after dropping a close decision to Johnny Sowder, Virginia Tech candidate, who relied on aggressiveness to overcome the Old Liners' heavy right hand.

Find Opposition Tough.

Farrar fought an improved boxer in Jones, the boy he had twice before eliminated in first round of tournament competition. Where he knocked him out last year, he was unable to more than beat him to the punch last night and was the recipient of several hard blows in the process of running up enough points to win.

Rogers was cautioned for holding his game foe, Ed Hubbard, of North Carolina, in the last bout on the program, and after that found him considerably difficult to nail with his terrific right. Hubbard landed several good blows in the melee and, although he took a bad beating in the first and third rounds, weathered the storm in good condition.

North Carolina moved four men into the semifinals and in Joe Fisher, 135-pounder, appeared to have a winner. Virginia Tech was represented by three entries, while North Carolina State had a single man remaining.

Action is set for 2:30 this afternoon in the semifinals, with finals tonight at 8 p. m. Winners in each class receive five points towards team championships, while losers in the finals are credited with three.

Navy Meets Army Today

Cadets Hope to Avenge Last Year's Defeat.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

West Point, N. Y., Feb. 25.—Army's basketball team ends it 1938 schedule tomorrow when it meets Navy here in the fifteenth renewal of the service court series. Navy is leading in the series with 8 victories over 6 for Army. With both teams represented largely by veterans of last year's closely contested Navy victory, an exciting spectacular contest, with neither team a favorite, is to be expected.

Army has had one of its most successful seasons, losing only to Yale and Syracuse. Starting the season with a 28-26 victory over Princeton, the Cadets defeated Johns Hopkins, Lafayette, Williams, Brown, Amherst and the University of Pennsylvania, until their winning streak was stopped by Yale at New Haven. Army then regained its stride to defeat Georgetown and Duke, only to succumb to the powerful Syracuse team, in a close game, 36-31. The Cadets came back to defeat Columbia on its floor, and Colgate here, in closely fought games.

Villanova Foe Of Columbus

Explorers Appear Tonight in Zone Meet.

Columbus University's boxing team meets its third major collegiate opponent within eight nights at Villanova, Pa., tonight when Villanova College's ringmen are battled at 8:30 o'clock.

Columbus defeated Appalachian State Teachers over last week-end and suffered its first defeat since 1931 last Tuesday night when The Citadel triumphed, 4½ to 3½.

Tonight's is Columbus U.'s only 1938 out-of-town attraction, the Explorers being scheduled to terminate their season against King College, of Bristol, Tenn., at Turner's Arena next Friday night.

Victorious on forfeit against The Citadel, 115-pound Georgie Marker will be out to defend his undefeated slate against Villanova tonight.

Calvert Beats Woodward.

Calvert cagers defeated Woodwardward Prep by the score of 17 to 12 yesterday afternoon in the Woodward gymnasium. Calvert took the lead at the beginning of the second period and kept it throughout.

Henry Armstrong Stops Rightmire For His 33d Kayo

Chicago, Feb. 25 (AP). — World Featherweight Champion Henry Armstrong caught up with Everette (Young) Rightmire, of Sioux City, Iowa, in the third round tonight to batter out a technical knockout triumph — the thirty-third time in his last 34 fights in which his foe failed to go the distance.

The spindly-legged Negro titleholder with the upper body of a heavier fighter, gave a crowd of 8,042 spectators in the International Amphitheater at Chicago's great stock yards, just what they came to see.

The signal of accepted defeat flutered into the ring at 1:28 minutes of the third, as the timekeeper's count reached five. Crushing rights to the jaw sent Rightmire down twice for nine-counts, before his seconds saved him from further beating.

Eagles Beat Bridgewater

American U. Scores a 38-24 Victory.

American University's in and out quintet was on its game last night in defeating a game but impotent Bridgewater College five, 38 to 24, on the Massachusetts avenue court.

Starting sluggishly, the Eagles found themselves unable to shake off the Virginians, despite an early 4-point lead, and left the floor at intermission with the score deadlocked at 13-all.

Princess-Wife Sees Gregory Win Bout

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 25 (AP).—Glamorous Princess Baba of Sarawak looked on with dignified interest tonight as her husband won a wrestling match from Fred Bruno, of Boston.

It was the first time since the marriage of the British rajah's daughter to Bob Gregory, English grappler, that she had watched him wrestle.

"I got tired of sitting so long," was her only comment afterward.

Gregory won in 6 minutes 50 seconds with an intricate double toe hold and arm twist he said he invented.

Track Stars Vie Tonight in New York Events.

New York, Feb. 25.—New York may see three world's relay records shattered tomorrow night as top-ranking athletes seek American championships in the 1,000-meter Swedish sprint, 1,600-meter and 2,900-meter medley relays.

Mark up the 2,900-meter relay as one of the great competitions of the year with the New York Curb Exchange, anchored by Glenn Cunningham; North Texas State Teachers, with the Rideouts; the New York A. C., anchored by Gene Venzke, and Manhattan College racing for the title as well as the 7:09 standard set by Princeton in 1933. Bill Bonthron ran the 1,500-meter anchor leg on that historic Princeton relay.

Present plans are for the New York Curb, 1937 winners, to use Harold Lamb for the 400-meter leg, Ed O'Sullivan for the 200 meters, Archie San Romani or Charlie Beetham for the 800, and Cunningham.

Nation's Ranking Table Tennis Aces Open Play Today for Titles

Ten States Represented by Field of 78 Players in Eastern Meet; Matches Start at 1:15 o'Clock.

Featuring the country's leading man and woman table tennis players, eight State or section champions and the Canadian national champion, the Eastern Championships will get under way at 1:15 o'clock this afternoon on six tables in the Heurich Gymnasium.

Fourteen of the 78 contestants bring national rankings to the sectional tournament and the entry will represent 19 cities of 10 States. Washington will be represented by 16 men and 6 women.

Local players fared poorly in the draw, as two of them are scheduled to face seeded opponents and another the Canadian champion in the first round while a fourth, provided he gets by his first opponent, runs into Sol Schiff, the No. 1 player of the country, in the second round.

It is Ray Sherfy, one of Washington's most experienced paddlers, who gets the crack at Schiff provided he beats the survivor of the Gordon Barry-Hamilton Conning match in the second round. Buddy Williams was the unfortunate local entrant to draw Lee Webb, the champion of Canada, while H. W. Grady and Leonard Summers drew the fourth and fifth seeded players.

Grady, a newcomer to local paddle circles, may not do so badly against Jimmy Jacobson, Yale's fourteenth nationally ranking player, however, as Grady won the championship of his home town, Evansville, Ind., for three straight years before moving here. Summers is conceded little chance against Melvin Rose, of New York, the nineteenth national ranking star.

The six women entrants from the District seem destined to lose out even before the start of the third round. Although she is the local champion, Florence Farwell meets Matilda Plaskow, of Philadelphia, in the second round. Mrs. Plaskow holds the eighteenth national ranking. Virginia Mapes, the city's only woman golf professional, meets Emily Fuller, current ranking woman paddler of the country, in the

Six Schools Enter Swimmers In Title Meet Today at Central

Six schools are entered in the annual South Atlantic high school swimming championships, which will be held this afternoon at Central under the auspices of the Central High School Graduate "C" Club. First event is at 2:30 o'clock.

This meet, being resumed after a lapse of several years, has drawn a formidable group of contenders and many records are expected to tumble. Representing Washington are Central, Woodrow Wilson, McKinley and Western, which will compete against strong teams from Goldsboro, S. C., and Baltimore Poly.

Compilation of team points will be made on a basis of 10, 8, 6, 4, 2 for first, second, third, fourth and fifth places in the relays, and 6, 4, 3, 2, 1, in all other events.

Gold, silver, golden bronze and bronze watch charms will be awarded after the finals of each event to first, second, third and fourth place winners.

The 50-yard free style race will be swum in heats, semi-finals and finals. All other events will be decided by time of each contestant.

In This Corner

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, for The Washington Post.

New York, Feb. 25.—Joe Louis, the mechanical man, is humanized at last.

I believe the complete blow-up of our world heavyweight champion Wednesday night made more genuine friends and admirers than any occurrence or achievement in the Brown Bomber's amazing career.

Anger, rage and passion are emotions that everyone understands. When you see a dead-panned guy, who is supposed to have ice water in his veins, rear up and hit the ceiling, an immediate bond of sympathy and understanding is established. That's what happened at Madison Square Garden when Louis knocked out Nathan Mann.

The fury of the Bomber's attack and the explosiveness of his blows brought 20,000 fans to their feet. But now that the roar of the crowd has faded and the heroic newspaper descriptions have melted into the past—one salient memory lingers on: the picture of an enraged young fighter slashing away like a tiger man—forgetting in his flaming anger the ring axioms he had learned—and intent only on beating his opponent into the resin dust.

* * * *

Louis got mad Wednesday night. That was the big stor, of his bout with Nathan Mann. The fact that he knocked out Mann in the third round to retain the world title and that a capacity crowd witnessed the feat were minor indeed compared to his anger. Because the king of clout never had become enraged in the ring before.

It seemed to me and to most observers in the Garden that three solid hooks on the chin early in the second round caused the champion to go berserk. But Manager Julian Black says those punches on the chin were merely the straws that broke the camel's back. They were merely the sparks that touched Joe off after other causes had primed him.

Black, who knows Louis better than the champion knows himself, says that when Louis was knocked out by Schmeling on June 19, 1937, he suffered a terrific mental let-down. The bottom dropped out of his life. The boxing writers started picking him to pieces and members of his own race started barraging him with letters accusing him of letting them down. Jolting Joe continued fighting and training merely because matches were made for him. His heart wasn't in his work, although he knocked out this man and that man. He even won the world heavyweight championship from Jim Braddock lackadaisically. And then he defended it against Tommy Farr, of Wales.

Farr not only lasted the full 15 rounds against Louis, but made such an impressive showing that many thought he had beaten the champion. That was the situation that blasted the Bomber out of his doldrums. Radio reports of that bout and newspaper comments thereon and another barrage of letters from colored writers aggravated the champion so much that he said, "ah'll show those folks what Joe Louis really can do."

Manager Black explains, "Joe took a new interest in fighting after that Farr bout. He was so on edge that he decided for the first time to get ready and give Max Schmeling a good beating in June. Before that he didn't care much whether he met or beat Schmeling. But after the Farr fight—with the newspapermen jabbing him every day, and people writing him nasty letters—he decided there was only one thing left in life to do, to beat Schmeling, the chap who had started all of his trouble. So, it was a different Joe Louis who started training for Mann. Never before did Joe show such interest in his conditioning, or try so hard in his workouts. And never before was he in such great shape as when he entered the ring Wednesday night."

* * * *

Louis was on edge when he climbed through the ropes against Nathan Mann. He was on edge physically and mentally. Then, all of a sudden, he was knocked back on his heels in the second round by a fellow whom he had regarded merely as his first of three "tune-up" opponents. And Mann came after him, ready to knock him out like Schmeling did and make him the laughing stock of the boxing world.

It was too much for the Bomber. He blew up. He blazed. He was so angry he felt like killing the man before him. He halted his retreat and charged into Mann, smashing away with both hands from all angles—forgetting his ring technique—fighting like a man in a street brawl. The rest is history. His attack was so savage, so murderous that today people are calling him a "Brown Dempsey."

Primitive fury featured his massacre of Mann. His attack had the savageness of rage that was lacking entirely in previous bouts—even when he methodically belted Maxie Baer and Primo Carnera into bloody pulps. Even in his greatest triumphs before, he had been like a fighting machine—doing the things he had been taught—"let your right hand be your referee, etc."

$5 Favorite Victor Over Sorceress

By the Associated Press.

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 25. After 13 straight favorites had gone down to defeat, the dazed players of public choices finally shook off the jinx with the running of the Palm Beach, a 6-furlong event for grade "C" 4-year-olds that was fifth on today's card. Gene Wagers, carrying the Kentucky-owned silks of Miss J. Van Winkle, came to the rescue with an easy two-length success, paying her thankful backers $5 for $2.

The chestnut colt, a son of Jean Valpean-Spun Coin, sped home in 1:12 3-5 over a track that was drying out under a steady sun. The bearer of the white and gold silks led all the way under Sterling Young. Sorceress, representing Miss A. Doris, saved second money by a half length from Hal Price Headley's Old Nassau. Eight horses started.

It was the winner's third start at this track. He finished third the first time, second in his next endeavor and moved up one more notch today.

Breaking very fast from the inside position, the colt quickly stepped into a clear lead over Sorceress and Old Nassau. The running order of the trio never changed, although Gene Wagers was not always daylight on top. Sorceress drew up to within a half length of the favorite around the bend and remained alongside the winner until inside the last furlong, where the "life saver" horse again widened his margin to two lengths. Sorceress tired and was hard put to stave off Old Nassau in the final strides.

Wise Hildred Wins.

Fourteen maiden 2-year-old fillies cavorted in the initial event, with Wise Hildred easily graduating by a length and a half margin. Over a drying-out strip, the daughter of Wise Counsellor made the sharp time of 0:34 1-5 for 3 furlongs. Porter Roberts, one of the better riders of juveniles, had the winner showing the way from flagfall to finish. Little Demon forced the running and was second by another length and a half over To Town. The latter and Miss Gino, which finished fourth, were "field" horses. The highly-fancied Catechism never was better than fifth. Wise Hildred paid $12.70.

The downfall of favorites continued when the Medway Stable's St. Moritz finished fifth in the second race. A. G. Tarn's Velociter, a veteran that had shown miserable recent form, turned a form flipflop and won the event by a length after being far back in the early running. He paid $27.70. Hypo also made up a lot of ground to be second by a like margin over the stopping pacemaker, Halle, which was a close second choice to St. Moritz. The latter raced well up for 6 furlongs, then faltered.

Manrico Scores.

The defeat of Pundit in the third race marked the twelfth in a row for public choices. This 1-mile event saw Manrico a driving victor in a blanket finish. Flying Benner was second, with Back Fence and Narise next in order. The quartet finished half lengths apart. Manrico, kept well up from the break by Sammy Williams, gained command around the last bend and held on courageously to thwart Flying Banner's last-furlong rally. The winner paid $17.10.

Form players received another beating when Xavier could only finish third in the fourth race, he being the thirteenth consecutive choice to fall by the wayside. Challenge Cup proved best of the ten starters, taking an early lead and successively staving off a stretch challenge by Grandever, which finished second, a length and a half behind. Xavier tired after racing well up and was beaten a half length for secondary honors. Challenge Cup paid $19.

Time Clock, the $4.30 favorite, beat Bailiwick a length and a half for the last purse, but the result was not official until the stewards had deliberated over the fact that Time Clock carried Bailiwick wide turning into the stretch. Parity was third.

*Field.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WISE HILDRED, $12.70, $6.30, $4.40; LITTLE DEMON, $7.80, $3.10; TO TOWN (field), $4.70.

WISE HILDRED began very fast, sprinted into a commanding lead in the opening quarter mile, but was ridden out strongly through the stretch to maintain her lead. LITTLE DEMON broke forwardly, but swerved out in the run out of the chute, responded gamely when straightened out and gained steadily, but could not reach the winner. TO TOWN, prominent and on the outside all the way, outlasted MISS GINO in the final drive.

SECOND RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:34. Off 2:35. Winner, A. G. Tarn's ch. h. (7), by Peter Pan—Charlotte B. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 4-5, 0:48, 1:13 1-5, 1:41.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VELOCITER, $27.70, $12.00, $6.70; HYPO, $42.30, $16.30; HALLE, $3.20.

VELOCITER, going in much improved form, moved up with determination on the extreme outside when straightened into the stretch, wore the leaders down and won going away. HYPO, also showing better form, bettered his position steadily in the last half mile while circling the field, took a brief lead in the stretch run, but was no match for the winner in the final drive. HALLE, away forwardly, raced BALLY STRATFORD into defeat, drew clear under slight restraint rounding the turn, but then suddenly faltered when challenged.

Daily Double, Wise Hildred and Velociter, Paid $131.00.

THIRD RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:03. Off 3:04. Winner, R. L. Hahn's b. g. (4), by Brilliant—Manrosa. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24, 0:48, 1:13 3-5, 1:40 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MANRICO, $17.10, $7.80, $5.90; FLYING BANNER, $7.30, $5.50; BACK FENCE, $9.00.

MANRICO, a forward factor in the early running, moved up strongly on the outside leaving the backstretch, raced NIGHT RAVEN and SUN ANTIOCH into defeat rounding the turn and drew clear entering the stretch, continued determinedly when challenged and outlasted FLYING BANNER in the final drive. FLYING BANNER, outrun in the early stages, finished with a rush on the outside. BACK FENCE, well up all the way, held on with good courage under punishment through the stretch.

FOURTH RACE—One mile (out of chute). Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:34. Winner, R. S. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CHALLENGE CUP, $19.00, $8.10, $4.90; GRANDEVER, $7.20, $4.70; XAVIER, $3.30.

CHALLENGE CUP, quickest to begin, was eased off the pace until approaching the half-mile pole, moved up swiftly when placed to pressure, raced WAR CAMP into defeat rounding the turn and opened up a commanding lead entering the stretch and maintained his advantage under brisk urging. GRANDEVER broke slowly and was outrun in the early stages, moved up steadily in the final three furlongs and wore XAVIER down in the closing strides. XAVIER, a forward factor all the way, saved ground into the stretch, but faltered in the final drive.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. The Palm Beach, Grade C. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:02. Off 4:05½. Winner, J. V. Winkle's ch. c. (4), by Jean Valjean—Spun Coin. Trained by J. H. Johnson. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23, 0:46 1-5, 1:12 3-5.

LITTLE JOCK	(Williams)	113	6	8	8°	8	8	8	8	26.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GENE WAGERS, $5.00, $3.70, $2.90; SORCERESS, $4.90, $4.20; OLD NASSAU, $3.90.

GENE WAGERS took command at once, set a fast pace and opened up a clear lead in the early running, was steadied rounding the turn, shook off SORCERESS when straightened into the stretch, but was ridden out briskly in the end. SORCERESS, always in nearest pursuit of the leader, made a game bid on the stretch turn, but then faltered in the stretch yield. OLD NASSAU, hard ridden and going well up for the entire trip, saved much ground entering the stretch and was wearing SORCERESS down.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,100; claiming. The Wildwood. For 3-year-olds. Start good from Bahr gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:31. Off 4:32. Winner, E. P. Bixer's b. g. (3), by Zacaweista—Chrysalis II. Trained by P. Beiber. Value to winner, $775, second, $175; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—POSTERITY, $7.00, $3.40, $2.80; UPSLALA, $5.10, $4.00; JOIN US, $4.00.

POSTERITY, away forwardly, forced a steady pace while racing on the outside, shook off his opposition at the furlong pole and drew out under steady pressure through the stretch. UPSLALA, prominent contender all the way, held on with good courage in the final drive. JOIN US gradually improved her position on the inside after leaving the backstretch, but could not overhaul the leaders.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 5:06. Off 5:08. Winner, Cosgrave Stable's ch. g. (5), by Jean Valjean—Uncle Sue Rose. Trained by J. Alexandra. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:53 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JACK FATCHES, $17.80, $10.10, $5.40; BREEZING ALONG, $14.20, $7.10; POMPEY'S PILLAR, $3.70.

JACK FATCHES drew out into a long lead rounding the first turn and then rated in front in the early stages, had something in reserve when put to a drive and held BREEZING ALONG safe in the final drive. BREEZING ALONG, always in close attendance of the pace in the early stages, moved up steadily in the final three furlongs and wore XAVIER down in the closing strides. XAVIER, a forward factor all the way, saved ground into the stretch, but faltered in the final drive.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-quarter miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Bahr gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:40. Off 5:40½. Winner, Mrs. E. D. Jacobs' blk. g. (7), by On Watch—Milford. Trained by H. Jacobs. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:49 3-5, 1:14 3-5, 1:40 2-5, 2:07 1-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIME CLOCK, $4.30, $3.60, $2.50; BAILIWICK, $6.40, $3.90; PARITY, $3.10.

TIME CLOCK, on the outside and in close attendance of the pace in the early running, drew clear midway around the lower turn, continued with determination under punishment through the stretch and held BAILIWICK safe. The latter went well up under vigorous pressure and moved up stoutly entering the stretch, but could not overhaul the winner. PARITY showed the most speed, but faltered in the final quarter mile.

Trophies Await Shooters Today

Continuing the popular Lewis Class distribution of trophies, the Washington Gun Club today will present two trophies on the first 50 targets of its program. These trophies will be eligible not only to club members, but to any visitors who may wish to compete. Following the competition for these Lewis Class trophies, there wil lbe a 25-target handicap event for "legs" on the Tony Wakeman prize, to be awarded to the competitor having compiled the most wins. Two legs are credited to the two high guns each Saturday.

Grounds of the Washington Gun Club adjoin the plant of the Potomac Electric Power Co., at Benning, and visitors are welcome, whether as spectators or as participants in the various events. Shooting is scheduled to begin at about 1:30 o'clock.

Sonny Workman Rides Seabiscuit In Today's Race

Los Angeles, Feb. 25 (F)—Owner Charles S. Howard announced today that Raymond (Sonny) Workman would ride Seabiscuit in tomorrow's running of the $7,500 San Antonio Handicap at Santa Anita Park.

While Howard went no further, it was assumed that if Workman turns in a good ride on the mighty Biscuit he will get the assignment to ride the horse in the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap.

Wilson Tankmen Lose; Mark Falls

The McDonough Military Academy natators handed the Wilson High School mermen their fifth straight setback in the Y. M. C. A. pool yesterday by taking first place in seven of the eight events, to register a 41-to-21 victory.

An added feature of the meet was Ernie Bogg's successful attempt to lower his old pool record in the 150-yard back stroke. The District ace clipped nearly two seconds from his previous mark by breaking the tape in 1:43.6.

Boggs will leave for New York Sunday to represent the Y. M. C. A. in the A. A. U. championships being held at the Hotel St. George Monday night. He is entered in the 150-yard back stroke event.

Results follow:

50-yard free style—First, Delahay (M.); second, Miller (W.); third, Cutler (W.). Time, 0:27.6.

Dear Al, Selections at Hialeah Park.

On opposite sides of the Nation today, important races will be contested. In name and purse, Florida has the edge with the Flamingo Stakes, formerly the Florida Derby. A good field has been named in the overnight entries. However, California takes some of the glare off that event with the San Antonio Handicap, which gains major attention because Seabiscuit, the money-winning champion of 1937, makes his debut and what probably will be his only tune-up for the $100,000 race next week-end, in the race. Seabiscuit will march postward to meet Aneroid, the horse he nosed out in the thrilling Brooklyn Handicap in New York last summer. The others in the field are also eligibles for the Santa Anita Handicap. The C. S. Howard colorbearer has shown good form in workouts and probably will be the favorite in the formidable field. War Admiral will be in his barn at Hialeah, but may be brought out for one of his daily trials. He was on the track today, but was asked for nothing resembling speed, confining his action to a jog. The track dried out quickly today and was nearing a fast condition as

By Jack Munhall.

In the last double-header of the interhigh basketball race last night at Tech gym, Western virtually clinched a tie for second place by whipping Roosevelt, 27-18, and Central won its first victory in ten starts, drubbing Wilson, 38-29. Some 750 students were in attendance.

Roosevelt still holds the runner-up spot to Eastern with 7 triumphs and three losses but Western is expected to finish with the same record by beating Wilson Tuesday in the final game of the series.

Western's victory was the result of a determined uphill fight and a great last-quarter spurt in which it tallied almost half its total points. Trailing 10-7 at half and leading only 14-13 at the end of the third period, the Georgetowerns tossed in 13 counters in the final eight minutes and won with ease.

Until the belated Western rally, the game was close. In the opening quarter the two teams threw 11 shots goalward before George West, Roosevelt forward, finally made a basket. Then Roosevelt jumped into a 6-0 lead on fiel dgoals by West again and Stein. Bob Holloran scored Western's only points in the stanza and the Red team was behind 6-2 as the second period started.

This margin was reduced to 6-4 on a pivot shot by Len Stanton, Western center, and the count was tied on another basket by the same man. Holloran sent Western ahead 7-6 on a free throw but that was the last lead it held until late in the third quarter.

Meanwhile, Jack Smith and West pocketed goals to stake the Riders to a 10-7 advantage at intermission. The third quarter was ni-and-tuck with never more than three points separating the fives. However, in the final six minutes, Western broke loose with a barrage of points by Custer, Stanton and Needle to register the last 9 markers of the game.

John Fanning, Central's great center, turned in the most brilliant individual performance of the series in leading the Mount Pleasant team to its initial victory. The slender, blond pivotman scored seven field goals and three free throws to account for 17 points, or almost half the number made by his team.

The teams appeared evenly matched in the first half and fought point for point. Wilson led, 8-5, at the close of the first quarter, but in a free-scoring second period, Central grabbed the advantage at 23-19 as the teams left for the half-time intermission.

Conspicious in this Central drive was the work of young Lawrence McKinney, a sub center who has seen little action this season. McKinney, a junior, scored seven points in a row and in less than three minutes. This one-man revolution overcame a 13-9 Wilson lead and put Central in the van where it remained throughout the remainder of the battle.

It was in the second half that Fanning accounted for the bulk of his points. With only three points to show for his previous efforts, he stepped out in the last 16 minutes to slam in 13 of Central's 17 points.

Top Weight Is Assigned To Seabiscuit

Workman to Ride Horse in Race Today; Florida Offers Big Event.

By the Associated Press

Raymond (Sonny) Workman will climb aboard the mighty Seabiscuit in the last of the big "prep" races before the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap, March 5.

Charles S. Howard, Seabiscuit's owner, selected Workman for the assignment today, but made no mention whether the jockey would get the much sought call to take the horse to the post in the "one thousand grand" next week.

Howard's regular rider and Seabiscuit's pilot in all his big races, Red Pollard, was bumped out of the running a wek ago, when he broke his collarbone in a bad spill.

Maxwell Howard's Seneshifter, stablemate of the $50,000 Derby winner, Stagehand; Aneroid, Calumet Dick, Today, Top Row, Sahri II, Star Shadow and Time Supply were among the entries which, with the notable exception of Pompoon, represent Seabiscuit's foes in the $100,000 race.

$20,000 Stake Race Today at Hialeah

Miami, Fla., Feb. 25 (AP).—Eleven of the best three-year olds in training in Florida climax their winter campaigns at Hialeah Park tomorrow when they match strides in the $20,000 Flamingo Stakes, until two years ago known as the Florida Derby.

Lawrin, Lavengro, Co-sport, Pasteurized and Joe Schenck—they all are in the field that will contest the issue over a mile-and-an-eighth, before an expected crowd of 20,000. If the winner is other than one of the above quartet, it will be a decided upset.

With Lawrin back in form after his poor showing in the Bahamas Handicap, the speedy son of Insco and his stablemate, Joe Schenck, from Herbert M. Woolf's Woolford Farm of Kansas City, Mo., were expected to draw the bulk of the support in the mutuels. The entry was quoted at 2 to 1 in the early line.

"You get t'hell outta here," he shouted, pulling off his headguard. "I'm not working as long as you stay," and he started to leave the ring. Ahearn, perspiration gushing down his forehead, rushed around the ring to him and shoved him back through the ropes.

"Shh, shh, shh." he shushed. "I'll geddim oudda here. G'wan and woik. You wand th' commishuner to think you're trying to take a runoud powder? G'wan and woik."

"You may have been around," Fishel retorted, "but you're gonna meet the best fighter you'll ever fight right here Monday night. I could lick a bum like you myself, and right now."

"Yeal," Ciaccio shrilled, starting through the ropes.

Ahearn thrust his perspiring person between the two a second time, grabbed Fishel by the shoulders, a bit roughly, and marched him through the door. The battle of the century was over.

Commissioner Paul Haworth appeared to examine Ciaccio, and after watching him belt Franklin around, climbed through the ropes and looked over his eyes, hands and body carefully.

"The fighter looks all right and seems to be in condition. I believe the commission will pass him."

Byron Nelson Paces Thomasville Tourney

Pennsylvanian Fires 69 to Lead Big Field in $3,000 Play.

By the Associated Press.

Thomasville, Ga., Feb. 25.—Young Byron Nelson, of Reading, Pa., smoothly stroked into a commanding lead over the field in the $3,000 Thomasville Open golf tournament with a great 66.

Nelson, a native of Texas, gave the older guard of the professional brigade a neat lesson in his 6-under-par exhibition that elevated him into a 4-stroke lead at the end of the first round of the 72-hole skirmish for $700 top money.

Two other young salaried players trailed Nelson with sub-par 70s to crowd the veteran campaigners into the background. Dick Metz, Chicago, had 32-38, and Pat Saywer, of Birmingham, Mich., put together a 34-36. Nelson's nines were 34-32.

The veteran Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., and Jack Grout, of Hershey, Pa., were deadlocked in third place with 71s, a stroke under standard figures.

Three veterans—Felix Serafin, of Scranton, Pa.; Vic Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., and Craig Wood, of New York—and John Oliver, of Valdosta, Ga., an amateur, were bracketed together with par 72s. Oliver, a former Georgia champion, was low among the simon-pures.

Lighthorse Harry Cooper, of Chicoppee, Mass., and Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., early favorites of the locker room, failed to come through. Cooper, leading-money winner and low average scorer of the winter circuit, needed 74 strokes and Revolta, the winner here two years ago, had a 77.

Gallaudet's Quint Loses

Unable to penetrate the visitors' well-knit defense, Gallaudet College's courtmen dropped a 40-31 decision to Juniata College in a fast game last night at Kendall Green.

Not until the last five minutes of play when the visitors had their second stringers on the floor did Gallaudet's attack function properly. It produced five consecutive goals, but the rally was ill-timed and abruptly terminated by the final whistle.

Patty Berg Is Victor in Ormond Beach Golf Event.

By the Associated Press.

Ormond Beach, Fla., Feb. 25.—Patty Berg, the Minneapolis redhead, was in striking distance of her fourth golfing crown of the year today when she swept into the finals of the South Atlantic championship by downing Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., and Fort Pierce, Fla., 5 and 3.

Tomorrow she meets Mrs. William Hockenjos, Lake Hopatcong, N. J., who won a thrilling semi-final match today on the twentieth hole from Katheryn Hemphill, Columbia, S. C., the defending champion.

Goodman Is Beaten In Houston Tourney

Houston, Tex., Feb. 25.—Outshot by a deliberate University of Texas law student, Johnny Goodman, national amateur champion, tumbled from the Houston Country Club's invitation tournament today after a battle that stretched to the second extra hole.

The victor, Bill Welch, deftly chipped in a 25-foot runup shot for a birdie two on the twentieth green after Goodman had rolled up for a conceded par 3.

Only a spurt of perfect golf on the last nine holes kept John Dawson, of Chicago, another favorite, from defeat. Seven fours and two threes on the last nine holes enabled him to defeat David (Spec) Goldman, Dallas, 1934 national amateur finalist, 1-up.

Former National Intercollegiate Champion Ed White, tournament medalist, eliminated Hickman Greene, Fort Worth, 2-up. In the third round he will meet Don Schumacher, trans-Mississippi champion, who eliminated W. A. Moncrief, sr., Fort Worth, 8 and 6.

Bespectacled Willie Maguire, jr., Houston, was too much for the veteran George Rotan, six times winner of the tournament. Maguire moved in against Emery with a 5-and-4 victory.

Whitehead, Allan Advance at Miami

Coral Gables, Fla., Feb. 25.—Charles Whitehead, of South River, N. J., scored a four-under-par 32 on the second nine today as he and Frank Allan of Pittston, Pa., the medalist team, came from behind to defeat Ed Romfh, jr., of Miami and Joe Bydolek, of Buffalo, 2 and 1, in the Miami-Biltmore amateur four-ball golf quarter-finals.

The winners carded a best-ball 69, two below par.

Bill Stembler and Pete Harris of Miami qualified to meet the medalists in tomorrow's 36-hole semi-finals by downing Bruno and Arnold Minkley, of Buffalo and Chicago, respectively, 1-up. The Miamians equalled par 71.

Dick Ciuci, of New York, and Bobby Dunkelberger, of High Point, N. C., show one-below-par golf to eliminate William Reed and Richard Keil, an Indianapolis team, 2 and 1.

S. C. Anderson and T. E. Price, of Miami, won by an identical score over Dick Chapman, of Greenwich, Conn., and Bill Meany, of Port Chester, N. Y. The Miamians were one-under regulation figures.

Export Bulge Lifts Wheat 1½c. a Bushel

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Feb. 25.—Much enlarged export business in United States wheat, totaling more than 1,000,000 bushels, ran Chicago wheat values up 1½ cents a bushel maximum today. Price gains, however, were substantially reduced by late profit-taking sales.

The rise of wheat was to the highest level reached here in a fortnight. Helping the upward trend were authoritative trade predictions that unless wonderful spring rains occurred in the United States and Canada, it would be unlikely importers could obtain wheat cheaper in the future than at present.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅛@½ above yesterday's finish, May, 94⅛ @94¼; corn, unchanged to ⅛ higher; May, 59¾@59⅞; July, 61¼; oats, ⅛ up, rye, unchanged to ¾ advance, and provisions varying from 10 cents setback to 15 cents bulge.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stock Tones Improve in Dull Trading; U. S. Government Bonds Higher; Dollar Yields.

New York, Feb. 25.—Stock held a steady tone in dull trading in spite of an early setback among industrial leaders. The majority of stocks held fractional gains to the close. United States were firm around their high prices of the year. Dollars weakened against sterling and francs. Commodities were steady. May wheat closed half a cent higher at 94¼ cents a bushel.

Stocks opened lower, recovered, and then dragged in the late trading. In view of the lack of favorable trade developments, the comparative steadiness of the market and its failure to go into a panic over the setback yesterday to its recent recovery helped sentiment considerably. On the bearish side were the omission of Chrysler's dividend, the cutting of Anaconda's payment, the announcement of salary reduction by General Motors, the further sharp fall in railroad freight car loadings (reported for last week), and reduced profits reports from numerous corporations.

Offsetting those items was the hope that a railroad freight rate increase would be announced shortly and that there might be some truth in the assumption that, because the business line had "flattened out," the next curve would be upward. That supposition was expressed by Chairman Robertson, of Westinghouse Electric, in an interview with the President, a view which doubtless the President was glad to hear and one which his own official advisers have been giving to him.

Temporary improvement in business may indeed be taking place, but any permanent recovery scarcely will come about so easily. It awaits the reopening of the capital market, which in turn is searching for the key of repeal of the undistributed profits tax and revision of the capital gains tax; it needs also peace between the Government and the public utilities, and requires some reassurance with respect to the future of the railroads.

Credit Is Ample.

Credit is plentiful enough and will remain so, at least until another sudden shift in Federal Reserve operations takes place. This week a rise of $50,000,000 in excess reserves was reported, the result of renewed Treasury spending and the change in gold sterilization practice. The holiday and the preparations for the March 1 moving day in agricultural regions brought a moderate rise in money in circulation, but Federal Reserve Bank credit in use fell and the New York banks reported a further deflation in commercial borrowing. The bank report showed that money continued to go abroad, but not at a great rate.

In stocks the initial drop of Chrysler by 2¾ points on the sale of 3,000 shares was the answer to the dividend omission, but after that the stock rallied and held fairly well to the close. Other stocks which gave up modest amounts at the start also improved. Early changes for the most part were fractional and a number were higher. Railroad shares had the usual weekend following on the oft-deferred hope of a favorable decision on the freight-rate application.

Steel, railroad, farm implement, airplane and rubber groups had the largest following. Trading was marked by several buying flurries and a sharp drop in sales volume when prices began to lose momentum. Rails ranged 1 to 2 points higher on larger volume. Southern Railway preferred was a late feature, climbing nearly 2 points in a short time. Leading steel issues made up 1 to 2 points.

Canadian Transfer.

Dollars turned quite weak in the afternoon after a steady and dull morning trade and the runup in sterling to above $5.02 was accompanied by reports in the banks that Canada was transferring some sizable month-end remittances into pounds from Canadian dollars. Some support was given to this idea by simultaneous weakness in Canadian funds, which dropped to parity with the dollar after selling at a premium for several days. Guilders rose sharply and even French francs managed to move up with other Continental currencies.

Odd Lot Sales Exceed Purchases

Because odd lot sales on the New York Stock Exchange have exceeded purchases for three consecutive days, the Securities and Exchange Commission has undertaken a study with a view to action if the new short selling rules have had an undesirable effect. The excess of sales is noteworthy as there have been few such instances since the SEC began publishing odd lot transactions in June. It is argued in some quarters that the new rules, which went into effect on February 8 and excluded odd lot transactions, are responsible for the recent increase.

Dividends and Wages.

The omission of the Chrysler dividend, announced after the close of trading yesterday, scarcely came as a surprise. The regular date for a dividend meeting passed two or three weeks ago without action and the market assumed that meant nothing would be voted. Apparently it was decided to hold a meeting in order to give reasons for the omission—which were the uncertainties of the outlook—and to provide a setting for publication of the past year's profits. In a period in which no such thing as an undistributed profits tax existed or when relations with labor were on a more predictable basis, any corporation that could make as much as $11 a share in one year, as Chrysler did last year, scarcely would omit a payment in the first quarter of the following year. However, under the sort of managed economy under which business is trying to get along, any dividend policy must perforce be a shifty one. As the chairman of the finance committee said: "So long as taxation of this character remains in force, directors are not in a position to adjust the dividend ratio of the corporation to a long term stable dividend policy." It is small wonder that so-called "venture capital" is hesitant to step in and lift business out of the depression.

Curb Exchange.

Wide gains on light demand in a number of public utility preferred stocks and further profit taking in the Cities Service Power preferreds took place on the Curb Exchange. Metal shares were prominent. Sales volume was about the same as yesterday, at around 100,000 shares. Preferred stocks of St. Regis Paper, Pennsylvania Power, Alabama Power, Gulf States Utilities, International Hydro-Electric and a few others rose 2 to more than 6 points on a few sales. Gulf Oil sold at the year's best price. Pittsburgh Plate Glass and Pepperell lost ground.

St. Joseph Lead.

New York, Feb. 25 (AP).—Directors of St. Joseph Lead Co., St. Louis, today declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on capital stock, payable March 21 to holders of record March 10. In previous quarters payments of 50 cents were made.

Harley Clarke Deal Fraudulent, Says Judge

Chicago, Feb. 25 (AP).—Federal Judge William H. Holly described as "fraudulent" today transactions by which Harley L. Clarke, former president of the Utilities Power and Light Corporation, obtained $2,000,000 in cash from a subsidiary of the concern. At the same time the court ruled the Atlas Corporation, holder of a major interest in the affairs of the parent company, was entitled to vote 100,000 shares of the common stock of Utilities Power and Light at the meeting of stockholders February 28.

Of the $2,000,000 deal, Judge Holly said: "All of these transactions are marked by an utter lack of good faith. Fraudulent is a rather mild term to apply to them."

Norwegian Issue Is Filed With SEC

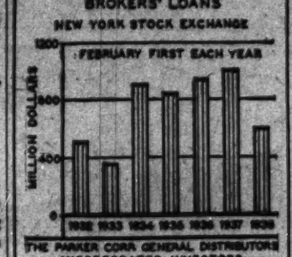
The Department of Akershus, in the Kingdom of Norway, filed a registration statement yesterday under the securities act covering the issuance of $7,000,000 of 30-year 4 per cent sinking fund external loan bonds, due March 1, 1968.

The Department of Akershuh is one of the 20 departments into which the Kingdom of Norway is divided. It surrounds the capital city of Oslo. The proceeds are to be applied toward the refunding of $6,580,000 of 35-year 5 per cent external sinking fund gold bonds, due May 1, 1963.

Cotton Consumption 22% Under Last Year

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics reported yesterday that 3,085,000 bales of cotton were consumed domestically during the first six months of the 1937-38 season. This was at an annual rate of 6,170,000 bales, or 22 per cent less than the 7,950,000 bales consumed last season.

Brokers' Loans Hit Five-Year Bottom



(Boston, Mass., Feb. 25.—Brokers' loans on February 1 were the lowest they have been since June, 1933, with a still further drop during February. The ratio of loans to the total value of stocks on the New York Stock Exchange also was at a low point for recent years.

Cotton Lower; May, 9.16 Cents

New York, Feb. 25 (AP).—After recovering from early losses today, cotton encountered renewed liquidation and some hedging to close at net losses of 6 to 10 points. May which had sold up from 9.13 to 9.26, then eased to end at a low for the day of 9.16.

The market opened 5 to 8 points lower in response to easier cables and under foreign selling and liquidation but recovered to within a point either way of the previous closing levels on a small amount of trade and commission house buying. Selling by brokers with cooperative connections toward the close and scattered offerings carried prices off 8 to 11 points from the highs.

The loans are available to producers until April 1, and mature 10 months from their date but not later than November 15 this year.

Ches. & Ohio to Sell 60,940 Preferred

New York, Feb. 25 (AP).—Directors of Chesapeake Corporation, intermediate holding company in the old Van Sweringen railroad system, have authorized the sale of 60,490 shares of Chesapeake & Ohio Railway preferred stock, series A, which the corporation received in 1936 as a dividend, it was learned today.

The sale of this stock will be arranged privately and will probably be offered to Eastern institutions. It was expected that the sale would bring around $5,000,000 to $6,000,000. Chesapeake directors, it was reported, are considering investing the proceeds in Chesapeake & Ohio common stocks at the present market levels, thereby increasing the corporation's equity in C. & O. common.

Silver Cargo Arrives For Chinese Defense

Boston, Feb. 25 (AP).—The S. S. American Trader steamed into Boston harbor today with 2,646 boxes of Chinese silver coins boosting her ballast—coins weighing 10,000,000 ounces and worth $4,500,000, sent here by China to purchase war supplies for defense against the Japanese invasion.

The coins, shipped by the London agency for the Bank of China and consigned to the New York Federal Reserve Bank, constituted the ninth such shipment to arrive in the United States since last November. The nine, aggregating 90,000,000 ounces, had a total value of $40,500,000, according to customs house figures.

Structural Steel Orders Less Than Half Year Ago

New York, Feb. 25 (AP).—New business booked by the structural steel industry in January was less than half the amount booked in January a year ago, the American Institute of Steel Construction reported today.

Estimated total tonnage booked for the entire industry was 71,619 tons, compared with 153,806 a year ago. Shipments in the same month totaled 84,491 tons, against 99,934 in January, 1937.

$100,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for two series of Treasury bills to the aggregate amount of $100,000,000, or thereabouts. One series will be 91-day bills and the other series will be 106-day bills. Both series will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders.

Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches up to 2 p. m. on Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

Bob Burns Says—

When people visit a place for the first time, they're naturally a little bit nervous. That's the reason the local officials who come in contact with them should be kind and patient. That's why my Uncle Fud was such a good conductor on a train down home.

One time a young married couple was ridin' on his train and when Uncle Fud asked for the tickets, the groom was so nervous he handed my uncle his marriage license instead of his ticket.

Uncle Rud looked at it and says "Well, young fella, you got a ticket here for a long, weary journey but it ain't on this line."

3 Army Officers Are Nominated To Be Generals

Col. Roger Brooke, Lieut. Col. Fairbank Among Two Named.

President Roosevelt yesterday nominated three Army officers for promotion to the rank of brigadier general.

Col. Roger Brooke and Lieut. Col. Leigh C. Fairbank were recommended as new assistants to Surg. Gen. Charles R. Reynolds, under a recent act increasing the number from two to four. Col. Arnold N. Krogstad was nominated to be wing commander of the General Headquarters Air Force, succeeding Brig. Gen. Gerald C. Brant, who has been relieved to take command of the Air Corps Technical Schools.

A native of Sandy Spring Md., Col. Brooke graduated in medicine from the University of Maryland in 1900 and entered the military service as a surgeon the folowing year. He graduated from the Army Medical School in 1902.

During the World War he served as senior instructor of officers and enlisted men at the medical officers' training camp at Camp Greenleaf, Ga., where he supervised training of more than 10,000 officers and 70,000 enlisted men. He was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for his wartime achievements.

Col. Fairbank, who will supervise work of Army dentists, is a native of Michigan and a graduate of Georgetown University dental school. He entered the Army as a dental surgeon in 1914 and was commissioned in the Dental Corps two years later.

Col. Krogstad is one of the Army's outstanding aviators.

Three More Colonels Raised to Rank of Brigadier General

Contract

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Sacrifice bidding is a great deal safer at duplicate than it is at rubber bridge. In the latter game, assume that the opponents bid a small slam, which may or may not succeed. It is apt to be an expensive process to take the bidding away from them by bidding seven, realizing fully that such a seven bid will be penalized anywhere from five to eight tricks. If by any chance the opponents slam could not have succeeded, the unnecessary penalty taken by the sacrificer is terrific. In duplicate, the worst that can happen under such circumstances is that the sacrificer will have one very bad board; his score for the entire evening will not necessarily be ruined. In the hand shown below, for example, South's sacrifice bid turned out very well, even though he went down no fewer than seven tricks.

North dealer.
East-West vulnerable.

	♠ 10 6 4 3 ♡ 9 7 2 ◇ J 5 4 3 ♣ J 6
♠ A Q 9 5 2 ♡ K 10 4 ◇ Q 9 7 ♣ K 3	North West East South	♠ K J 8 ♡ J 6 ◇ A K 10 8 2 ♣ A 7 4
	♠ 7 ♡ A Q 8 5 3 ◇ 6 ♣ Q 10 9 8 5 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	1 ◇	1 ♡	1 ♠
Pass	3 ◇	4 ♣	4 ◇
Pass	4 ♠	5 ♣	6 ♠
Pass	Pass	7 ♣	Double
Pass	Pass	Pass

South bid his five-card heart suit before his six-card club suit because he had fully intended to go very high defensively and felt that it would be more comfortable to show the suits in oder of rank. West, it should be noted, made a waiting bid after his partner's jump in diamonds and South's club rebid. West, of course, could have made a stronger bid than four diamonds but was hoping for confirmation of his spade suit. When it came, he did not dilly-dally but jumped to the slam in spades. Obviously the slam would have been cold and would have earned a score of 1,430 points. Though they made a mighty effort to better this score on defense, East and West could not defeat the seven heart contract more than seven tricks, for a penalty of 1,300 points. Thus, the sacrifice turned out well on a match-point basis.

At rubber bridge it would have been much too dangerous for the commensurate gain. Any slight change of distribution might have defeated six spades, and even if it had been made, North-South would have been only 330 points the loser from failing to "save."

There's a drive in Congress for pensions for widows and dependents of all World War veterans—even if the veteran dies from causes not connected with the war.

Where does public opinion stand on the pension question? The Gallup Poll made a Nation-wide survey of Americans in every walk of life—asking this question:

"When a World War veteran dies from causes not connected with the war, should his widow and children be given a pension by the Government?"

The Gallup Poll also made a special survey among war veterans and their wives. If the public and not Congress decided the issue, what would the vote be? Read The Gallup Poll in

Col. Schofield Expires at 65; Burial Monday

Funeral services for Lieut. Col. Lane Schofield, 65, U. S. A., retired, who had been representative here of many companies in connection with sales to the Government, will be held Monday morning at 11 o'clock in St. Thomas' Episcopal Church. The rector, the Rev. H. S. Wilkinson will officiate. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

Col. Schofield died Thursday in Walter Reed Hospital. He had been ill for several months. A member of the Officers Reserve Corps, he was a veteran of the Spanish-American and World wars, serving in the latter as camp ordnance officer at Camp McClellan, Ala., as a major. Sixteen years ago he retired.

For some years Col. Schofield represented the Simmons Co., dealers in metal beds and hospital supplies, in sales to the Government. He lived at the Chastleton Hotel.

Col. Schofield was a Mason and a member of the Scottish Rite. He belonged to Washington Commandery, No. 1, Knights Templar, and Almas Temple of the Mystic Shrine, and was affiliated with a Masonic Blue Lodge at Chamblee, Ga. He belonged to the Army and Navy Country Club, St. Thomas Episcopal Church and was a native of Bath, Pa.
